

Brimberry scheme unnoticed for 6 years, Arnstein says

By PATHAY LUTZ

For the Press-Record
Testifying in the perjury trial of Thomas Brimberry on Thursday, former Stix and Co. President Fred Arnstein told jurors that Brimberry's $16 million embezzlement scheme went virtually unnoticed for nearly six years.

Arnstein told Assistant U. S. Attorney Terry Adelman during direct examination that he "became suspicious" of Brimberry only after subpoenas were served at Stix and Co. on 10 accounts controlled by Brimberry.

When he questioned Brimberry about the subpoenas, Arnstein testified, Brimberry told him that the Internal Revenue Service was investigating some $20,000 of unreported income from several years earlier. "He gave the indication that the problem did not appear to be a serious one," Arnstein said.

During cross examination, Arnstein told Defense Attorney David

Lubell that he hired private investigators to study Brimberry's rumored "lavish" lifestyle, telling Lubell that investigators reported that the source of Brimberry's funds could not be determined.

Brimberry had explained his ability to pay for his lifestyle, which included gambling trips to Las Vegas, a private jet, a $1.5 million mansion in Granite City, and all-expenses-paid vacations for friends and family members, saying that his wife, the former Janice Miller of Granite City, had inherited a great deal of money.

"The cover story about the inheritance fooled you completely, did it not?" Lubell asked, the Arnstein hesitated several seconds before answering quietly, "Yes."

Arnstein also explained the series of events which led to James Massa, a Collinsville attorney already convicted as a co-conspirator in the scheme, obtaining control of Stix. The company was continually in need of operating capital, Arnstein testified, and Massa presented himself, through Brimberry, as a potential investor.

Three investments, with a total value of more than $1 million in cash, gave Massa controlling interest in the firm.

Earlier testimony by Michael O'Rourke, chief examiner for the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), also outlined Massa's eventual control of the firm, and testified that the fraud was undetected by SEC and internal audits. "The fraud was concealed masterfully, and we did find it," O'Rourke said.

Former manager of the bond department at Stix, William Swanson, denied grand jury testimony by Brimberry that he was part of a "going block" with Massa, Brimberry and Leonard Bednar on the board of directors. Later testimony by Arnstein disputed Swanson's denial, when Arnstein said, "I regarded him (Swanson) as obviously one of those who would vote with Mr. Massa."

Swanson also testified that, contrary to Brimberry's grand jury testimony, he did not participate in meetings with Brimberry, Massa, and Bednar where they discussed a plan to "put Stix in a financial bind," allowing Massa to step in and take control of the company by buying company stock.

Swanson told Lubell that, although he associated with the three men, both socially and in business, he did not learn of the scheme until he read about it in the newspapers.

Brimberry is being tried for eight counts of perjury before the grand jury and two counts of attempting to conceal assets from a federal bankruptcy trustee.

The trial, being heard in U. S. District Court Judge Clyde Cahill's court, was recessed today and is expected to last two more weeks.

Treatment plan to become a reality

By BILL WINTER

of the Press-Record

More than a decade after such cooperation was envisioned by federal authorities, governments here are taking a regional approach to sewage treatment.

Granite Cityans will get added help in meeting the cost of operating their giant treatment plant, which was built extra large in conformity with the regional concept.

MADISON, VENICE and other cities and areas will see their treatment costs rise—but they will avoid even costlier construction of secondary treatment facilities elsewhere.

Care will be taken to assure that each community contributes 100 percent of its share of the fees, rather than Granite City or a new regional body having to "fuss and fight" with outlying areas to collect from slow-paying families (as was the case with the regional ambulance program).

Timely action is being taken to assure 75 percent state-federal financial participation rather than a soon-to-be 55 percent level. The grants will help pay for added lines, lifts and sludge control.

These and other points were cited as Granite City Mayor Paul Schuler, Madison Mayor Mike Sasyk and Metro East Sanitary District President Walter "Shang" Greathouse gave a progress report last week.

Addressing the March community prayer breakfast sponsored by Granite City Rotarians, the officials gave talks and then responded to questions from the gathering.

LEGISLATORS present were State Senator Sam Vadalabene and State Representatives Sam Wolf and Monroe Flinn. Bill H. Terrell presided and the Press-Record was the host.

Mayor Schuler related that the 12-member regional board, which eventually is to become a regional authority, will consist of five persons appointed by the Granite City mayor, four named by the MESD president, two by the Madison County Board chairman and one by the Glen Carbon mayor. The regional chairman will be designated by the mayor of Granite City.

Greathouse stressed the sanitary district's desire to become totally removed from sanitary sewage flow and treatment responsibilities and to concentrate on stormwater drainage.

It is estimated that the existing plant, which provides primary and secondary treatment before sewage is deposited in the Mississippi River, is large enough to accommodate extensive areas of Madison and St. Clair counties for at least ten years.

CONTROL of the 24 million gallons a day facility will remain with the City of Granite City for the time being, due to fast-approaching federal grant deadlines.

Conversion to a regional agency will be complex and will require additional time, but the task is seen as feasible by all parties, the breakfast group was told.

However, the board will have much authority from the start, including review of the annual audit, submission of related recommendations, review of the yearly budget, and review and recommendations

Boy with gun frightens pupils

An 11-year-old boy with a handgun and bullets in his possession may have waved or aimed the weapon at one or more fellow pupils Thursday to frighten them.

His parents are cooperating with school and law enforcement authorities to assure that the gun will no longer be where he could find or remove it.

He has been suspended from school for three days. Four other boys were suspended for one day for leaving Maryville Elementary School without authorization. They accompanied him as he returned the gun to his home during the lunch hour.

A number of youngsters but no adults saw the weapon in the building Thursday morning and it is thought to have been placed in three student lockers at various times.

No one reported it to the teaching staff, some saying they did not want to be "snitches."

The gun, described as .44 caliber, was waved toward a pupil, either on the street or at the building, some said. Authorities are unsure whether it was pointed at others.

A note sent to the parents of all Maryville School fifth graders Thursday afternoon by Principal Jack Mulach related, "We feel it is very important we inform you of an incident at school today."

"One of the students brought a gun (pistol) to school this morning. We became aware of the incident after one of the students had gone home for lunch and reported it to her father, after which he called me."

"After questioning of the students, it was discovered that they were all aware that the gun was in the student's locker. Several of the students had actually seen the gun."

"We are greatly disturbed that none of the students reported this incident to their teacher."

"Due to the danger involved, we feel it is very important that each parent sit down with their children and discuss the difference of 'tattling' and a situation that could result in a tragedy."

Two houses to be moved Tuesday

As National Supermarket prepares for constructing a new store twice the size of the present one adjacent to the current location at Madison Avenue and Nameoki Road, some things have to move to make way, among them being two complete houses.

Crews plan to move the two houses, weather permitting, from Iowa Street to Cargill Road Tuesday. Granite City police are asking residents along the route the houses will take to keep cars and other vehicles off the street between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. tomorrow. No parking notices will be erected where possible.

"THESE LOADS will be so wide that we cannot proceed where there are parked cars, so all parked cars on the routes will be towed," said Chief of Police Ronald J. Velzer.

The route of the "roaming houses" will be across Nameoki Road from Iowa to St. Clair Avenue, one block to Myrtle Avenue, south on Myrtle Avenue to Victory Drive, east on Victory, which turns into Terminal Avenue to Maryville Road, north on Maryville Road to Pontoon Road, east on Pontoon Road to Cargill Road and south on Cargill Road to south of Grigsby School, which will be the new home of the houses.

"We hope for the cooperation of the residents along the route in keeping the streets clear. Any cars found parked on those streets will delay the move and we will have no choice but to tow them, with the owner paying the towing fee," Velzer concluded.

Discrimination is alleged by coaches

By SUSAN SIGNAIGO-WEICH

of the Press-Record

Female basketball and track coaches at Madison schools are suing the school district for what they feel is a violation of the Equal Pay Act of 1963. The two say that they are paid less than their male counterparts and feel their salaries should be raised accordingly.

The Equal Pay Act prohibits sex discrimination in the payment of wages to men and women who are performing "substantially equal work" in the same institution.

THE LAWSUIT was filed last July by the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) on behalf of Carol Cole, Madison High School girls' basketball, volleyball and softball coach, and Luvenia Long, Madison High School girls' track coach. The women are seeking $10,000 each for the "emotional distress, humiliation and embarrassment" they have received because of the lawsuit and $20,000 each in punitive damages.

The complaint was amended last month to include two other female coaches from the Madison School District — Waneta Graham, the former Madison High School girls' softball coach, and Barbara Cox, Middle School girls' basketball coach.

John Papa, attorney for the school district, said that he had received a list of the grievances from the women's attorneys Wednesday. He agreed that the salary for the girls' basketball head coach is higher than the girls' basketball head coach, but

Offer free X-rays of Girl Scout cookies

St. Elizabeth Medical Center will X-ray boxes of Girl Scout cookies on Wednesday, March 28. There will be no charge for this service.

The Radiology Department at the medical center is making this service available to community residents because there have been reports that Girl Scout cookies purchased in the St. Louis area, have been found with razor blades, straight pins, needles and glass fragments in them. X-rays of the cookies will show if there are any metal objects in the boxes, authorities said. Persons interested in having cookies X-rayed should bring them to the Radiology Department Wednesday between 6 and 8 p.m.

As a result of the reports, Girl Scout officials in St. Louis are offering refunds on any cookies purchased through the annual program. People wanting refunds can return the cookies to several St. Louis locations including the Girl Scout Service Center, 815 Olive St., St. Louis, third floor, between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Failure to file state tax return can lead to criminal prosecution

Meeting one's state income tax responsibility may not be a task relished by many individuals, but failing to file a return can lead to unpleasant consequences, according to an Illinois Department of Revenue official.

Legislation passed in 1982 increased the penalty for intentionally violating the state's income tax laws to a Class A misdemeanor for first offenders, punishable by up to a year in prison and a $10,000 fine. Repeat offenders could be charged with a Class 4 felony and, if convicted, could face up to three years in prison and a $10,000 fine, according to Laurence Mulcrone, deputy director of the Illinois Department of Revenue's Investigative Services Bureau.

To avoid any misunderstanding which could end in prosecution, Mulcrone urged Illinois citizens to become aware of just who is required to file a state income tax return (11-1940).

"State statutes clearly spell out the criteria for determining who must file a state income tax return," Mulcrone said.

All residents or part-year residents of Illinois during the last year are required to file a 1983 state income tax return if they were required to file a federal income tax return or had income in 1983 which exceeded the amount allowed for exemptions ($1,000 multiplied by the number of exemptions — or a proportion of that amount if not all income is earned in Illinois).

"For example," he said, "if an Illinois couple with one child had Illinois income over $3,000 (or if they were required to file a federal income tax return), they would be required to file an Illinois income tax return."

Mulcrone said that persons who didn't have state or federal taxes withheld from their paychecks because they expected to earn less than the amount subject to federal income tax still must file an Illinois income tax return and pay state income tax if their wages exceed $1,000 times the number of allowable exemptions (Or a proportion of that for part-year residents or non-residents).

On the other hand, if you don't owe state income taxes, but your employer withheld taxes from your wages, you would have to file a state income tax return to receive your refund, Mulcrone added.

Mulcrone reminded taxpayers that the state has stepped up tax enforcement with major additions to its staff of auditors and collectors.

"This increased enforcement, combined with the stiffened criminal penalties for breaking the law, should make taxpayers think twice before taking the risk," Mulcrone said.

"We have the responsibility to make sure each taxpayer is paying his or her fair share — no more, no less — so that the honest taxpayers are not overburdened," Mulcrone said. "And," he added, "it is the taxpayer's responsibility to be informed of state tax laws, as with any other laws, and to make sure he or she is complying with them."

Massive victory by Simon

By BILL WINTER
of the Press-Record

Congressman Paul Simon was favored to win the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate on Tuesday and did so in unusually convincing fashion.

State Senate President Philip Rock snared the Illinois Democratic Central Committee's endorsement from Simon, who originally had expected to receive it. But Rock wound up fourth in the primary balloting with 300,097 votes or 19 percent of the total.

Alex Seith, who captured the nomination six years ago and ran strongly against Republican Charles H. Percy, totaled 333,441 or 21 percent.

State Comptroller Roland Burris, who has come close to setting vote getting records in past elections, ran well Tuesday. He garnered 352,239 or 23 percent of the total.

But Simon, a former lieutenant governor, left all of these major contenders far behind. He received a smashing 551,129 tally for 36 percent and a clear-cut triumph.

The 55-year-old Makanda resident moved to the Carbondale area to run for Congress and is completing his fifth two-year term in the district immediately south of here.

He formerly represented Granite City and environs in the Illinois House and Illinois Senate, residing in Troy.

An author and articulate speaker who "does his homework" on issues facing Congress, Simon now is being described as having an excellent chance to defeat the popular Sen. Percy on Nov. 6.

The Democratic nomination in the 22nd Congressional District was won by Simon's predecessor, Kenneth Gray, who had resided in Florida in recent years. Gray tallied 40,877 to State Senator Kenneth Buzbee's 33,238.

The incumbent U.S. senator gained renomination with relative ease Tuesday, attracting 385,048 or 59 percent to Congressman Thomas Corcoran's 238,390 or 36 percent.

Sen. Percy, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, originally went to the Senate in 1966, defeating Sen. Paul H. Douglas after Percy had lost the governor race in 1964.

Now 64 years old, Percy has been in Washington ever since and can cite 18 years of Senate experience. But fourth terms generally have been hard to achieve in this state, and it could be a close battle this fall.

President Ronald Reagan had no opposition on the Illinois Republican ballot for renomination.

In the popularity phase of Democratic presidential aspirants' Illinois competition, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale received 663,607 or 41 percent. Senator Gary Hart polled 578,736 or 35 percent and the Rev. Jesse Jackson garnered 339,933 or 21 percent.

Projections showed Mondale with 97 delegates, Hart with 39 and Jackson with none in this state.

Although the dust of the primary election has not fully settled, the Democratic presidential hopefuls already are campaigning in other states and the Senate campaign is well under way.

Simon said in Chicago yesterday that Sen. Percy has been a strong supporter of the present federal administration's economic policies.

Describing himself as an opponent of Reaganomics, Cong. Simon said his approach to legislation—if substituted for Sen. Percy's—would have resulted in a current governmental deficit $135 billion lower than it is.

Also speaking in Chicago on Wednesday, Sen. Percy said Simon is "a high-quality individual who can campaign on the issue" but would lack the seniority impact that Percy provides. The senator predicted that it would take Simon many years in the Senate before he could "get anything done" for Illinois.

Percy said he (Percy) has been responsible for much significant legislation that has been of dramatic benefit to this state and nation.

Once a dreaded diagnosis, there is now no need for fear. Recent developments in both medical treatment and surgery have reduced the seriousness of the problem, if caught in time. Some problems can be treated with drops so that surgery is not always indicated. Common to almost all types of cataracts is a blurring or dimming of vision. If it persists, see your ophthalmologist. If he gives you a prescription, bring it to us for immediate filling. Your sight is important.

Discrimination

said that this is not a reflection of the coaches' sex, but of the sport itself.

ACCORDING TO PAPA, the interest in a particular sport played by girls at Madison schools is less than the interest in that same sport when it is played by boys. Therefore, he says, it is the popularity of the sport determines the amount of pay, not the sex of the coach.

Papa cited a case where a man was the coach of the girls' tennis team in Madison several years ago. Papa said that this male coach also was paid less than the coach of the boys' tennis team.

He said other factors the district uses in determining the amount a coach is paid include: the number of students that participate in a sport, the number of games played, the length of the season and the amount of experience a particular person has at coaching a sport.

WHEN COMPARING the high school coaches to be paid using the criteria outlined by Papa, the results are as follows.

Head Basketball Coach Larry Graham has been a coach at Madison High School for 15 years. During that time he has brought two state championships to the school, and has been awarded several coaching honors, including Illinois high school Coach of the Year in 1977 and 1981. He also has coached at Parks College and St. Elmo High School, St. Elmo, Ill.

Mrs. Cole has been coaching at Madison High School for seven years. The team had a good record this year (21-3) and has been improving, but has not yet won a state championship.

AS THE BOYS' head basketball coach, Graham is considered the supervisor over all of the boys' basketball teams — varsity, junior varsity, sophomore and freshman. Last year, this was a total of 44 boys.

Mrs. Cole is in charge of her team only — this included 14 girls this past season.

Graham was assisted in his coaching duties by three other coaches. Graham received $1,900 for his services and his three assistants received $1,210 each. Dividing the total salaries paid by the number of students involved, this comes out to $125.60 paid per student in the program.

MRS. COLE did not have an assistant in her coaching duties. She is paid $965 for her services. This translates to $68.92 paid per student.

The boys' varsity basketball team was scheduled for 23 regular season games this year. Dividing this number into Graham's salary, this comes out to $82.52 a game.

The girls' team had 19 regularly scheduled games this year. Dividing this into Mrs. Cole's salary, this comes out to $50.78 a game.

PAPA SAID THAT, despite the difference in the salaries, the school board is attempting to bring the payment of the female sports coaches up to that of the boys' sports, as public interest in girls' sports increases.

This interest is apparent when comparing the salary increases the coaches of the two sports have received. In the six years that there has been a paid girls' basketball coach, the salary has increased by $765, or an average of $127.50 a year. This is a 382 percent increase.

The head boys' coaching position has increased $520 in the past six years or an average of $86.66 a year. This translates to a 38 percent increase.

THE RESULTS ARE similar when comparing the boys' and girls' track figures, but on a smaller scale. This is because the boys' track coach is paid less ($1,210 a year) than the boys' basketball coach, while the two girls' coaching positions receive the same pay.

Papa admits that the smaller amount of experience the directors of the girls' sports programs have is probably due to the fact that girls' sports have not been in existence as long. "There's no argument about the fact that girls' sports have boomed in recent years, but should the school district be at fault for the coaches not having started sooner in their careers?" he asked.

Whether or not the school district is at fault will not be decided until October, when the case will be heard in Alton by a jury, presided over by U.S. District Judge L. B. Beaty of Granite City. In the meantime, depositions have been taken from 22 teachers and coaches in the Madison schools.

ATTORNEYS representing the women coaches include Robert Johnson and Fern Wolf for the federal EEOC and St. Louis attorneys Mary Anne Sedley and Leslie V. Freeman.

Johnson, reached last week for comment, said he could not discuss the case at this time.

Treatment plant

on staffing and operations, Schuler said.

Environmental Protection Agency federal and state guidelines will govern the program.

Rate adjustments will be monitored, and there will be procedures to guard against one construction permit in another construction, the mayor noted.

HE PREDICTED there will be no treatment rate increase in Granite City.

The city will retain jurisdiction over its 64-inch-diameter sewer line, existing pumping stations and the combined sanitary and stormwater sewers that serve one-third of Granite City.

Described as a key part of the plan is the reduction of sludge volume by 50 to 60 percent through new burning techniques, cutting the cost of transporting it to landfills.

Granite City has qualified for a $1,589,275 grant, and MESD has received a grant of more than $4 million, with each adding another $5 percent.

MESD will contribute 4 1/2 million gallons of sewage a day, with a 12 million peak load, Madison County more than a million gallons a day, with a four million peak, and Glen Carbon one million with a three million peak.

FEE COLLECTION delinquencies were estimated at eight to 10 percent in Granite City and higher in some of the more distant areas.

Monthly rather than quarterly billing may be tried in some of the areas due to the increase that low-income families will need to pay at a low amount.

The possibility of utilizing water service cutoffs to enforce payment for sewerage treatment service is being studied.

Mayor Sasak said Madisonians once considered a link to the Saugat million cost estimate has grown to $90 million there.

He praised Greathouse and the MESD board for making great headway in keeping district spending within reasonable bounds after previous extravagance.

"POLITICIANS NEVER get much credit, anyway," he commented, adding that he nevertheless wanted the prayer gathering to be aware of numerous MESD accomplishments and of the participating parties' rapid development of a highly complex treatment agreement.

Greathouse said Washington Park, National City, part of East St.

Louis, Fairmont City, Brooklyn, Caseyville, National Stockyards and Swift Packing Co.—as well as Granite City, Madison, Venice, Glen Carbon and the townships of Chouteau, Nameooki and Venice—may be among those routing sewage to the Granite City treatment plant.

He emphasized the importance of keeping costs at a minimum, since they can be devastating to the budgets of industries with operations that involve extensive sewage.

Storm drainage alone is a giant task for the Metro East district, which serves 100 square miles in parts of two counties, Greathouse commented.

Some of the district's present sewage treatment facilities are to be used as lift stations to help move sewage to Granite City, he said.

Madison and Venice residents currently pay $1.95 a month for primary treatment at the Lansdowne plant in East St. Louis and this could rise to $6 or more, it was estimated.

Customers to be served by the new regional treatment district total 10,500 in Granite City, 8,000 in MESD, 3,000 in Madison County and 2,000 in Glen Carbon.

Blocking of grain sought

Efforts are being made by the Illinois Farm Coalition and Illinois Farm Alliance to sign blocks of grain.

The two groups have helped organized a nationwide drive to sign up soybeans for $10 a bushel, corn for $4.50 and wheat for $5.50.

Erwin Wein, a local area spokesman, said, "This is being done so producers of grain will receive enough money for their production to pay their bills and the costs of planting a new crop for 1984."

Alan Libra, an Alhambra farmer, says blocking of crops is needed to achieve adequate prices and halt a collapse of the farm economy. Many farmers are borrowing heavily, he adds.

Blocking involves a grain producer agreeing to hold back a certain number of bushels instead of selling them immediately on the market.

Groups cooperating include the National Farmers Organization, American Agriculture Movement and Farmers Union.

Drug problem is society's, not solely the schools'

"We do not have a drug problem in the high school or the elementary schools, or even in the bowling alley. We have a drug problem in the nation and this city," Gilbert Wamsley, principal of Granite City High School, told members of the Granite City Optimist Club Thursday afternoon and urged that parents take a more active role in keeping their children from abusing drugs or alcohol.

"The schools are one of the few places meeting the drug and drinking problems head on," he contended.

WAMSLEY said "hard drugs" such as heroin or cocaine are not a major problem in high school students here. Marijuana use is more prevalent, but still not the main problem. "The number one problem is booze. The problem is that too many parents think it's a 'laugh off' and they are willing to host beer parties in their basements. Too many adults are making money selling booze to students," he said.

"Alcoholic beverages are killing our kids and our cars," he added. Students who are missing other types of drugs seldom get them from a neighborhood "pusher," he contended. "The problem is abuse of mom and dad's medicine cabinet. Kids can get uppers, downers, weight loss pills and others from the drug cabinet at home. Parents should have some accountability for their drugs. I have had too many cases of teens using drugs and when I called their parents in, they would say they thought they had been buying more drugs than usual lately, but never thought about their kids taking them," Wamsley said.

"OUR STUDENTS have no access to heroin or cocaine, but have super access to their parents' medicine cabinet," he warned.

He said he believes one reason there are very few alcohol or drug-related problems in the high school is "positive, clearly-stated disciplinary standards, uniformly applied. The first time a student is caught, it is three days off. The second time, they go elsewhere to school. For selling any substance, they are separated from us (Coordinated Youth Services or other alternative education program)."

Wamsley praised the GCHS students, not only for avoiding the heavy alcohol and drug abuse many schools experience, but for getting along well in the adverse situation of having 3,650 students in one building when they are used to having less crowded situations in two high schools. "There were all kinds of rumors that would happen when we put the North (former Granite City High School North) kids in there (formerly South). People said they hate each other, just because there was some rivalry at the sporting events."

"I'D LIKE to tell you how it went. Last week, we had our actual first flatfoot, and that was between two (former) South students. If a North kid has a fight, I feel certain it will be with a North student. We don't have North-South problem. The kids have just been marvelous. We have just had no student problems caused by bringing the two schools together," he stated.

He noted that a recent Press-Record article featured two outstanding GCHS students, one formerly from North and one from South, who work together and hang around together, who still wear their letter jackets from the school each attended last year. They are a sign of unity, Wamsley said.

"Merging the schools was kind of like coming home, all together again," the principal stated.

HE SAID it was personally difficult for him, after helping plan, staff and open North and being its principal for 10 years, to be the one to close it. "I'll bet I'm the only principal in this district that ever opened and closed the same school," he said.

He said that despite the "turmoil and troubles" created by the current budget crisis and the layoff of many teachers last year, he feels students are getting a good education at GCHS. "We are educating young people better than schools did in our day. We never even heard of calculus or microbiology until we were possibly in our second year of college. Students are taking those courses at Granite City High School," he said.

He cited the Junior Engineering Technology Society (JETS) team at the school, which competes contests requiring numerous academic skills, including drafting, mathematics and many more. "Our JETS team won both the regional and the sectional and next Tuesday morning will be sent to Champaign to compete in the state. They are among the top 18 schools in the state now," he said with pride.

IN ADDITION to educating students well, the public schools are awarding a higher percentage of students diplomas, he said. While the dropout rate used to be high in the past, approximately 95 percent of the high school students now stay in high school until graduation. Through programs tailored to fit various problems, such as the need to work part-time or alternate education programs, more students are able to complete high school than ever before, the principal told the Optimists.

Fire at residence causes $8,500 loss

Fire last week caused $8,500 damage to a one-story frame residence at 2311 E. 23rd St. and $3,500 damage to its contents.

The blaze at the home of Jo Ann Toolen was of unknown origin but firefighters said the cause probably was electrical in nature.

Flames reached paneling, ceiling tile and joists, wall studs and doors. Firemen were at the scene from 10:10 p.m. Wednesday to 12:10 a.m. Thursday.

Nutrition Fair Wednesday at SEMC

Quad-City area residents are being invited to attend Nutrition Fair, Wednesday, from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Wiesman Room of St. Elizabeth Medical Center. According to Nancy Wargin, chief dietitian, the American Dietetic Association has designated March as Nutrition Month.

"The Fair is our way of making the public aware of the importance of proper nutrition," she said. "It will consist of a number of games, including a fruit walk, bingo and a poker game. There also will be a wide variety of foods available."

Tickets for both the games and food booths will be on sale for 10 cents each or 11 tickets for $1. Medical Center dietitians will be on hand to help answer questions concerning diet, foods and nutrition.

The Food Service Department once again sponsored a nutrition poster contest for all private and public elementary school students. "This year's theme is 'Everyone wins with good nutrition.'" All entries will be placed on display, in the hallway near the cafeteria, March 26. SEMC associates will vote for the poster of their choice. There will be two winners from grades 1 to 3 and two winners from grades 4 to 6. The winners this year will receive free tickets to a Cardinal baseball game.

For more information concerning nutrition month, interested individuals may call the Food Service Department at 798-3160.

Volunteers sought for KETC auction

KETC-Channel 9 is looking for retirees to join the Auction Adventure. Volunteers are needed to help put together the station's annual fund-raiser, broadcast live April 27 to May 6.

The 10-day event offers volunteers the opportunity to become part of St. Louis' only televised auction. Preparations are well under way, with dozens of positions open and ready to be filled. According to Beverly Barozinsky, special projects manager, "Volunteers can arrange hours to suit their schedule. This is a great chance for retirees to meet new people and to share their skills — or maybe to learn a few new ones."

Barozinsky suggests a wide variety of tasks for interested volunteers, particularly for people to phone businesses to arrange an auction donation. Both businesses that have previously contributed and new, potential donors will be contacted. Many calls need to be made in Missouri and Illinois by people phoning from Channel 9 or from home, in order for the auction to meet the goal of 6,000 donated items.

Volunteers who prefer not to work at a desk and who have access to a car or truck, are needed as go-getters to pick up donated items near their homes. Other jobs include handling and arranging merchandise in the warehouse.

Retired clerical workers and secretaries are in high demand in the auction office. There is computer terminal work for typists, as well as mailing lists and letters to type. In addition, the auction needs writers to pen on-air copy describing the items, and individuals to staff phones and answer the many questions regarding donations and volunteering.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the 1984 Auction Adventure may call 1-314-725-5575.

Rapist attacks girl walking from church

A Granite City girl walking home from church at 11:55 a.m. Sunday was pulled into a garage and raped, police were advised by the victim's mother, who took her daughter to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment.

In an interview with the young woman, 18, an officer and a SEMC social worker learned the victim was accosted while walking on Washington Avenue by a blond haired man, described in his 20's, who called the girl by a name that was not her own.

He grabbed her arm and refused to let her go and, although she told him to leave her alone and tried to get away, the victim said that he pulled her into a garage with an auto inside.

Clamping his hand over her mouth, he kept telling her to be quiet and threatened "to hit her hard," she said, meanwhile pulling off her clothing and forcing her to the ground.

During the attack, the girl kept moving around trying to avoid him until the man struck her in the abdomen, she told police.

Before leaving her in the garage, the rapist threatened that if she told anyone about the incident he would find her and beat her so badly that she would end up in the hospital, she related.

After the attack, the girl dressed and began walking south on Washington Avenue, where she was spotted by two relatives who were

2 MEN CHARGED WITH UNLAWFUL WEAPON USE

Steven M. Utz, 22, and Dean J. Montgomery, 21, both of St. Louis, were charged by Venice police at 1:15 a.m. Friday with unlawful use of weapons and failure to have Firearm Owner's Identification (FOID) cards.

The men allegedly were firing rifles on the Venice riverfront. Utz was released on $204 cash bond and Montgomery agreed to pay a $270 fine.

High speed chase ends in cars hit

A police pursuit at 11:40 p.m. Friday during which speeds at one point, were estimated at nearly 100 mph ended with damage to three parked vehicles in the 2200 block of Grand Avenue and the arrest of an Arkansas man.

Randy Lee Sickler, 20, of Paragould, Ark., who fled on foot from the vehicle he allegedly was driving, was taken into custody in the 2200 block of Grand Avenue by a police sergeant.

He was charged with resisting a police officer, fleeing and attempting to elude police, failure to give information upon striking an unattended vehicle, speeding and not having a valid license (his Arkansas license was allegedly suspended).

The chase started in the 3000 block of Madison Avenue when Sickler's 1980 Tornado allegedly was clocked on radar traveling 54 mph in a 35 mph zone. The motorist turned east to the 3000 block of Iowa Street and then west on 28th Street, crossing Madison Avenue and making a left turn onto Grand Avenue, reports said.

Pursued by a squad car at an estimated 75 mph, the car headed south on Grand Avenue, a north-bound one-way thoroughfare, for several blocks, attaining speeds of close to 100 mph, it was alleged.

Sickler's auto allegedly side-swiped a 1979 car owned by Edith Ryan, 2259 Grand Ave., which was parked at the curb, and continued on the fleeing car then struck a 1973 auto belonging to Phillip Jaime, 221 Grand, and a 1972 car owned by Frank Adams, 2218 Grand. Both vehicles were parked at the curb.

While still in custody at 3:35 p.m. Saturday, Sickler complained of appendicitis pains and was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment. His condition was diagnosed as flu symptoms and he was given medication and returned to jail at 5:55 p.m. that day.

BOOK ST. LOUIS MEN ON WEAPONS CHARGES

Called to the Venice riverfront area upon reports of shots being fired near the pumping station at 1:15 a.m. Friday, Venice officers took into custody Steven M. Utz, 22, and Dean J. Montgomery, 21, both of St. Louis.

Both men were charged with unlawful use of a weapon and with not having Firearm Owner's Identification cards after .22-caliber shell casings were found on the floor of the vehicle.

Allegedly in the vehicle also were two loaded .22-caliber automatic rifles, a .22-caliber handgun, a 30-30 lever action rifle and about 750 live rounds of .22-caliber rifle ammunition.

Utz was released at 11:55 a.m. Friday upon posting a $204 cash bond. Montgomery was released at 4:20 p.m. that day to pay $270 and appear in court in June.

ELECTION NIGHT HOPES.

Victorious Mondale delegate Charles Hester, Granite City, clasps hands with Fourth Ward Alderman Sharon Perio, after it appeared both won delegate slots. Bob Stanton, (a member of the Granite City Aerie 126 and an Illinois Fraternal Order of Eagles state trustee), and District 7 director, opened the Illinois District 7 meeting, hosted by Alton Aerie 254, as his first duty of the day.

Opening prayer was given by Bob Colbert of the Alton Aerie, presentation of the American Flag, Bible and Eagle was made by Bill Lepping of the Alton Aerie, followed by reports submitted by Carl Buehler, Granite Aerie, and secretary of the district, Ellis Wiseman, Shiloh Aerie 545, treasurer, and Virgil Gibson, Collinsville Aerie 1051, trustee.

The roll call of district officers included: Bill Hemken (Granite Aerie) past director, Bob Stanton (Granite Aerie) director, John Piper (Wood River Aerie 2773 and Granite Aerie) vice president, Guido Gasperin (Collinsville Aerie 1051) pro-tem Bob Colbert (Alton Aerie) chairman, John Daley (Granite

New members initiated from Bellevue were Duane Dauphin, Jim Engelage, Wayne Ridout, Joel Wade, Shawn Bahorich, Mike Massingale, Attorney Strunk, Ron Scott, Danny Lynch and Larry Yuengle and from Alton were, Steven M. Tunnell, William E. Elliott, Joseph C. Begley, James D. Ranney, Mack A. Colbert, William E. Baker, Jack W. McShane, Donald G. Kirbach, Ronald L. Hunter, Jesse R. Blasoli and Jack E. Jamieson.

The state officers welcomed the new members and emphasized, "You have just been initiated into the Fraternal Order of Eagles which is known throughout this nation and the world, but your own Aerie can only progress if you as individuals put your best effort forward by getting involved in Eagle activities, charity drives and as our grand work president, Pio Scagnelli, has stated "Try to bring in at least one new member into your Aerie each year for each member of your club."

James Whirlidge, (Shiloh Aerie and Granite Aerie) complemented the Bellevue Aerie for the great gains they had made in the past few months on their membership gain.

Stanton asked for approval of the following appointments that he wanted to make for the district. His first appointment was of Harold R. Love (Granite Aerie) as District 7 accepted, and the second appointment was of James Whirlidge (Shiloh Aerie and Granite Aerie), Randy Odom (Granite Aerie president) and Bill Lampe (Alton Aerie) to the District 7 by-laws committee, to which they accepted. All were approved by district members present.

Love, inside guard (Granite Aerie vice president), said, "I have some interesting facts about the Eagle's most of us know. It was noted in the Eagle Magazine, Milwaukee, that past grand president and Eagle Editor Judge Bob Hansen has been inducted into the Wisconsin State Eagle Hall of Fame, was reappointed to the "Presidents Committee on Employment of the Handicped" by committee chairman Harold Russell. Judge Hansen has served several terms on the committee and has steered the Fraternal Order of Eagle's toward a greater role in the campaign to provide equal opportunity for handicapped citizens, and will be in charge of arranging entertainment for the national convention to be held in Milwaukee, Wis."

Ell Dupont (Shiloh Aerie), Illinois chairman of the Jimmy Durante Children's Fund, will be one of four people in charge of parade arrangements for the national convention.

Love also noted, "That in the Eagle Leader newspaper, Milwaukee, from the "Eagle Spotlight on the Central" it was reported that the statewide Illinois REAC luncheon in Moline (June 21) was announced by Felix Yost (Alton Aerie) state REAC chairman, and that bells will ring (membership gain), predicts Randy Odom, the young president of the Granite City Aerie."

Stanton (Granite Aerie), director, asked for and received confirmation on the location and dates of the forthcoming district meetings which includes: Collinsville Aerie, April 8, Bellevue Aerie, May 20 and Granite City Aerie, June 10.

Director Stanton closed the meeting following the final ceremony conducted by Bill Hemken (Granite Aerie), Bob Colbert (Alton Aerie) and John Piper (Wood River Aerie and Granite Aerie).

Early pregnancy classes forming

The Obstetrics Department at St. Elizabeth Medical Center is offering free Early Pregnancy Classes beginning in May.

Early pregnancy classes are for women less than six months pregnant. These classes are held for three consecutive weeks and offer instruction in nutrition, exercise and breast conditioning. Women also learn how their bodies change during pregnancy and how the fetus develops.

The classes will begin on Wednesday, May 2, and continue on May 9 and 16 at McKinley School from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Expectant mothers interested in these classes may register by calling the Obstetrics Department of SEMC at 798-3040.

14 million grant for veteran nursing units

Commander Andrew C. Gilchoff reported to members of Chapter 53, Disabled American Veterans, at the March meeting, that on Feb. 7th, Governor James Thompson released $14 million to pay for the remaining conversion costs of four vacant structures at the Manteno Mental Health Center into residential skilled nursing units that will house 75 veteran residents in each facility.

He previously released $4.75 million for conversion of three other units at the center. The facility is scheduled to start accepting residents in late 1985.

Another item of interest to those of you who had planned to donate $10 of their Illinois tax refund for a single taxpayer or $20 for a married couple filling a joint return to the Illinois Veterans Home at Quincy, and who had decided not to because of information that you will encounter delays in receiving your refund can now make the donation and the refund will be processed within the normal eight to ten weeks, he said.

The members are asked to read National Commander Joyner's viewpoints in the March issue of the DAV magazine.

Larry Lockhart announced that a member, Steve Barzoff, died recently and that Fred Collins is ill and is receiving out patient care from Scott AFB Hospital. Lockhart said he was recently appointed an associate service officer in the Illinois Department of Veterans Affairs by Gov. Thompson.

An interesting note from the Department of Veterans Affairs is that there are three Spanish American War widows living in the Illinois Veterans Home at Quincy. The Quincy home has 631 residents, 121 of which are spouses and widows of veterans of WW I, WW II and the Spanish American War.

Joe Hefferly said the membership now stands at 407. "I doubt that we will be able to meet the new quotas set by national headquarters, that are 444 by June 30, 1984, 496 by December 31, 1984, and 524 by June 30, 1985, he explained."

A donation was approved by the Musicians Local 717 to aid handicapped musicians and approval granted for four members to attend a testimonial in Chicago in May honoring the present State Commander John Moran.

James Miller served a corned beef and cabbage dinner after the meeting.

Park District sports programs topic of Historical Society

The featured speaker for the March meeting of the Old Six Mile Historical Society was Al Barnes, sports columnist for the Granite City Press-Record. His topic was "The Granite City Park District's Role in the Development of Athletics in the Quad Cities."

Barnes barely missed becoming a teacher of history. In the fall of 1930 when he entered his freshman year at Lincoln College in Lincoln, Ill., he was interested in both history and sports reporting. During his senior year at Lincoln High School he had covered sports for the local paper. The sports editor promised he would get him on the paper's staff during his freshman year in college. That year, 1930 was the last year a teaching certificate would be given to a person with one year of college.

The call from the newspaper didn't come, so Barnes decided to get his teaching certificate and become a history teacher. He and his roommate, Thornton Ford, were to go the next day and pay the $5 fee for the teaching certificate.

That evening Ford, who worked his way through college as a prize fighter, had a fight. Barnes covered the fight, wrote the article, and took it to the newspaper at 7 o'clock the next morning. He was informed that he had the job as a staff reporter and became a sports reporter instead of a history teacher.

He ended his career as Sports Information Director at S.I.U. Edwardsville. Two years before retirement, he was thinking about what to do with his time after he retired. The retirement age had just been increased from 65 to 70. He talked with the Press Record publisher about a job as a "substitute" reporter. The year he retired, the recession hit and the paper backed away from the idea. During the big snowstorm of two years ago, Barnes was called to fill a vacancy, temporarily, as sports editor. At the end of two weeks he accepted the proposed idea of writing a column.

PARENTS CLUB MEET

Parents Without Partners, Granite City Chapter, will meet on Wednesday, March 28, at 7:30 p.m., in the Disabled American Veteran's Hall, 19th Street and Grand Avenue. All divorced, legally separated persons, widows, and widowers with children are welcome. For more information call Bob Young at 877-0162 or Wallace Cook at 451-0296.

Barnes moved to Granite City in June 1954 with his wife, Joyce, and their family. He became a frequent user of the park, playing tennis.

The history of athletics in Granite City was exciting. In the spring of 1940, Andy Feldman took his team to state. Granite City won the Illinois High School Basketball Tournament. The tournament was held at the University of Illinois gym which held 6,000 people at that time. Today U of I's gym seats 18,000.

This team set a record that will never be broken. Granite became the first and only team to lose in regional competition and because of a "play back" rule which was in effect at the time, were allowed to come back. The team which defeated them in the regionals was Wood River.

Another high point in Granite City sports came in 1948 when Coach Lawrence McCauley led the baseball team to the school's only state baseball crown.

"Emmett Mutt Rensing was a tremendous football talent. In high school he was one of the best backs in the U. S. He was highly recruited by schools such as Notre Dame and the military academy. He enrolled in St. Louis University, where he was used as a blocking back, never carrying the ball for four years," the speaker explained.

After college he married and never played football again. Barnes said he had long thought and heard that the park district was the reason for the success of Granite City high school sports. In his research he found that this was not so.

There were a lot of difficulties in digging out the facts. Barnes found the records in disarray from 1906 to 1930. To make matters worse, the newspaper, during this period, gave only the last name, and not the first.

According to Barnes, former mayor Leonard Davis, is the "greatest athlete per cubic inch" that Granite City ever produced. The scoring record he established with a team called the Pals, still stands.

One of the biggest roles in the development of local athletics was the Y.M.C.A. During the 1920's and 30's, and especially during the depression, it was the center for youth activities. It developed a great swimming, basketball, and many other programs. The records show the "Y" Men's Church Leagues were ferocious.

Another misconception which Barnes held was that the Granite City Park District had built the Lincoln Place gym. In his research he learned that the gym had been built by Commonwealth Steel, at the urging of Arthur Moore and Clarence Howard.

The park district does deserve credit, however. It's tennis and baseball program led to the domination of these sports by Granite City for years.

Granite City played a key role in the development of tennis great Jimmy Connors. Jimmy's mother, Gloria Thompson, first tried to develop his brother, John. Barnes was present at the court when John told his mother he didn't want to put in all the hours of practice required. Jimmy who was sitting on the hood of his grandmother's car nearby said, "I'll do it." Jimmy's mother set up a rigorous schedule of practice — four hours a day. Ernie Karandjeff and others worked with Jimmy on different aspects of his game and served as practice partners for him.

The park district must also be given credit for the major share of the development of soccer in the area. When a school can boast six state championships, it is phenomenal. In contrast, the school has won only one championship in basketball and one in football.

"The Park District's program started youngsters at a young age, and made fields available. It is ironic that St. Louis is supposed to be the center of mid-American soccer, yet Granite City has more soccer fields per capita by a ratio of four to one.

Barnes remarked on the poor availability of records concerning women in sports. Many women, such as Barbara Kersch, played an important place in Granite City sports.

In the 1920's there were many women's teams throughout America. In the 1930's, however, girls were told that sports were bad for their health. School boards, faced with the economic problems of the depression, used this excuse to drop many of the girls' athletic programs.

When the fire at Granite City High School occurred several years ago, many of the sports pictures and trophies were destroyed. Mr. McCauley cried when he saw the damage. Lawrence McCauley had been a football star and All American at Mizzou.

The speaker issued a plea to the historical society to help him set up a two-point plan to perpetuate sports in Granite City. First, he suggested the establishment of a Sports Hall of Fame with an annual banquet. He stressed the total community involvement in local sports. Secondly, he noted the need for a museum to preserve the history of local sports. He pointed out the need for research and interviews to gather information. Although there are newspaper microfilms available, many are sketchy.

Barnes said he found it satisfying to him as a native Illinoisian, the slow and begrudging acceptance of the ability of Granite City soccer players by Bob Gueller, coach at S.I.U.E. The tremendous defensive player, Steve Trittschuh, finally convinced him. Gueller should also be convinced by the tremendous record that Granite City has displayed in the last five years against St. Louis schools.

The bulk of the credit, according to Barnes, especially in fundamentals of the sport, must go to the Granite City Park District. Without the fields which the district has provided, this program would not be possible on its present scale. Barnes also credits the parents who have coached and supported the Park District's programs over the years.

The next meeting of the historical society will be at St. John's United Church of Christ on May 7th at 7:30. It will be the annual meeting and election of officers.

The program for the evening will be "The Old Country Schools." Ferd Segar will talk about Athens School; Norman Soechtig will tell about Braden and Nameoki Schools; Sand Prairie will be discussed by Georgia Engleke; Alice Pfroender will tell about St. Thomas School.

June 4 will mark the beginning of the society's fourth year. This meeting will also be at St. John's U.C.C. "The Old Country Schools" will continue as the program topic.

Waldo Frohardt will discuss Kinderhook School; Wilbert Engleke will discuss Central; Alycia Seipel will talk about Stallings School; Georgia Engleke will tell about St. John's Parochial and Marguerite Lexow will talk about Mitchell and Franklin Schools.

The public is invited to attend all meetings of the society.

Kindergarten pupils here mastering counting skills

Mrs. Dorina Knight, Kindergarten teacher from Mitchell School, and Mrs. Helen L. Miller, kindergarten teacher from Prairier School, represented Granite City School District Nine at the third annual Illinois State Kindergarten Conference, held this month at Glenbard East High School, Lombard.

Theme of the conference was "First Steps to Educational Excellence." Fifteen hundred participants from districts throughout Illinois and from Iowa, Indiana and Wisconsin came to learn about areas of basic curriculum as related to the development of young children.

The conference was divided into six strands — reading and language arts basics; the importance of music, motor skills and the arts; mathematics and science; practical activities of good teaching; current early-childhood political and policy issues; and early childhood administrative leadership. Keynote speaker for the conference was Angette Y. Kirk, a member of the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

Speakers from this area included Mrs. Kathy Weber, Edwardsville teacher and recipient of the 1983-84 Illinois teacher of the year award, Dr. Suzi Nail, a professor at SIUE, and Mrs. Miller.

"Mathematics that 'Counts' was the title of Mrs. Miller's program. She explained how basic math concepts can be understood by a young child when he or she uses manipulative materials such as legos, unifix blocks, counting beads and dominoes.

She demonstrated original activities that teach counting skills and the quantitative meaning of numbers, and others which provide problem-solving challenges for young children.

Other issues discussed at the conference related to the use of computer software in the kindergarten classroom and to the adoption by the state of Sept. 1 as the required entrance date for children entering kindergarten for the first time.

Most of those attending the conference were strongly in favor of a law which would require every child in the state to be five years old before Sept. 1 in order to be eligible to attend kindergarten.

Mrs. Knight and Mrs. Miller plan to share what they learned with all the kindergarten teachers in the district in the near future.

Speedway could benefit area

Preliminary plans to build a major auto racing speedway in near Parks Bi-State Airport in Cahokia make sense.

There are literally millions of auto racing fans in the Midwest and many of these trek annually to the major speedways at Indianapolis, Florida and Michigan to watch major USAC and NASCAR racing events. They spend millions of dollars outside of this area for tickets, food, lodging, gasoline and other expenses.

There is no reason a major racetrack in the nation's heartland could not succeed. Most race fans do not hesitate to drive several hours to reach a major race. That gives a track in this area a tremendous population upon which to draw, including the Chicago area.

As anyone who has been to Indianapolis can testify, the speedway spawns numerous other businesses, even though it holds only one major race each year.

In addition to a major speedway seating 40,000 to 60,000 people, there also are plans being formulated for a $1 million expansion of St. Louis International Raceway on Route 203 south of Madison. If both these projects become reality, this area could become one of the major racing capitals of the world, with first-rate facilities for drag racing as well as oval racing, including Indianapolis-type cars, NASCAR stock cars, sports cars and others.

We will watch these projects proceed. They could be a bigger blessing to this area than many can envision.

'Superstars' was a good idea

While it was not the largest spectator event of the year, it certainly was one of the most fun.

We refer to yesterday's Corporate Superstars competition at the YMCA. From talking to many of those who attended, the event is bound to catch on as an annual event.

Approximately 100 persons, half being participants, spent three hours in the YMCA gymnasium yesterday watching local bankers, businessmen, hospital employees and others participate in such fun events as the water balloon toss, tire rolling race and a grueling obstacle course.

The mood was friendly, mildly competitive and, most of all, fun. Afterwards, the participants were sore, skinned up and tired, but most said they will do it again next year.

Congratulations are in order to Chris Carenza, the YMCA's new program director, for setting up such a challenging and fun lineup of events. While things did not always go smoothly, for the first time out, the program ran pretty well.

The whole idea was to get people out to see the YMCA again and remember that the old facility is still here, is still clean and is serving hundreds of people, young and old. It was kind of an open house to get people back to the YMCA. It worked.

We look forward to next year's Corporate Superstars and hope more teams and more people will be able to enjoy it as much as those attending this year's event.

Cancer deaths continue decline

The news from cancer researchers gets better every day, but it is still a long way from being happy news.

The survival rate of children who are found to have cancer has climbed to 50 percent who survive at least five years. In the 1950s and 1960s, these children would have had virtually no chance of survival more than a short time.

There were 17,411 fewer deaths from childhood cancer from 1965 through 1979 than would have been expected to die at the 1950 rate. Leukemia mortality declined by 8,075 deaths and the number of deaths from kidney tumors dropped 2,393, according to the National Cancer Institute.

Among adults, the statistics are not as impressive, but steady progress is being made.

Chemotherapy, new X-ray treatment methods, improved surgery and better postoperative care are among the factors improving the cancer victims' chances of survival.

There is still a long way to go, but with continued funding for research, we can only dream that the causes of cancer will be discovered and it can be abolished in our lifetimes.

other such high demand, new economy areas.

The recommended $37.5 million increase is a large percentage of new general revenue dollars than we have seen in past years and indicates a stronger commitment to higher education. Since the income tax increase will be eliminated on July 1, it appears that the governor's recommendation is as generous and commendable as the higher education as the fiscal condition of the state will allow.

I cannot judge the accuracy of the revenue projections on which the governor has based his recommendation. But if the projections are correct and the General Assembly appropriates an additional $37.5 million to higher education, higher education in general and Southern Illinois University in particular can play a productive and meaningful role as Illinois adds to the future.

KENNETH A. SHAW

Chancellor, SIU

Shaw welcomes increased funding for SIU

To the Editor,

The governor has released his recommended budget figures for fiscal year '85. His recommendation for higher education reflects an increase of $37.5 million over the current year. I feel it is important for you to know what this number means for higher education in general and Southern Illinois University specifically.

The governor's recommended budget level will allow higher education to respond well, though not ideally, to the needs of FY '85. These recommended dollars will be used in part for faculty and staff salaries to reduce the frustration our employees feel in constantly lagging behind the salaries of comparable employees in other states. This level will probably help to avoid further substantial tuition increases above the level recommended by the Board of Higher Education.

The figures do not mean, however, that all of the needs in higher education will be met. In fact, an additional $36 million would be required to meet IBHE recommendations for higher education operations for FY '85, another $41 million to meet the IBHE FY '85 retirement recommendation, and every university physical plant shows the need for long-deferred but still unavailing maintenance dollars.

The Board of Higher Education has adopted an allocation of the governor's budget. For Southern Illinois University, the governor's budget represents an $8.7 million increase over the current year. The appropriation and is $4.5 million less than the Board of Education recommended level.

Of the $10 million in his budget to strengthen academic programs related to economic development, SIU would receive $1.3 million, which we will apply to computer-related needs, engineering, uses and

Homeowners' responsibilities limited

Law and you

By Rick Reed
Attorney at Law

Homeowners will sometimes contact an attorney and indicate that a guest in their home has been injured on the premises. What they did not know was that the person who goes onto another's property for companionship or enjoyment of hospitality. Whether or not the homeowner can be held liable for the injuries sustained by the guest depends upon the conduct of the property owner.

Generally speaking, a property owner will be held responsible in this situation only if he failed to warn the guest of concealed defects that were known to the owner, or if the owner's conduct was "willful and wanton," in that it showed a conscious disregard for the guest's safety.

In a recent case, the parents of a teenage boy were aware that their son had invited 20 teenagers to their home for a party. The parents also were apparently aware that alcoholic beverages would be served on the premises. What they did not know was that their son invited one particular guest to maintain discipline and to act as a bouncer if any of the teenagers became too rowdy. Apparently the son knew that the bouncer was an extremely violent person who had a reputation for harming others.

During the course of the party, evidently large quantities of alcohol were consumed. Shortly before midnight, the bouncer attacked one of the guests and permanently injured him. Subsequently, the injured guest sued the parents, their teenage son and the bouncer for the injuries he sustained at the party.

The court found that the complaint against the parents should be dismissed in this case. Although they knew about the party and the consumption of alcoholic beverages, the court felt that this in and of itself did not show a conscious disregard for the safety of the injured guest. There was no allegation in the complaint that the parents knew a bouncer was invited who had a reputation for harming others.

The court, however, refused to dismiss the case against the son. They felt that he could be held responsible for the guest's injuries since he employed the bouncer. Illinois law is clear that an employer is liable for an employee's actions which bring about injury to others if they are committed within the scope of his employment. The court also noted that the son, in hiring the bouncer, could be liable for the plaintiff's injuries for recklessly hiring someone who he knew was unfit for the job.

This case points out that an injured guest cannot recover from the homeowner based on ordinary negligence, which is defined as the failure to use reasonable care. As a social guest, the injured party will have to demonstrate willful and wanton misconduct by the property owner, which is a conscious disregard for the safety of others. This requirement will mean that in many cases, the injured guest will be unable to hold the homeowner responsible for his injuries.

There has been some discussion by the International Olympic Committee towards extending an invitation to the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles to some groups other than countries. Persons shopping at Crossroads Plaza Sunday were asked if they would favor an invitation to a group such as the Palestine Liberation organization.

Tim Plafcan, Granite City

"I don't think they should be invited, because the most obvious being the incident in Munich, (West Germany) during the 1976 Olympics. Anyway, invitations are usually just sent to countries. The PLO isn't a country. It's a group."

Arvil O'Quinn, Cahokia

"I don't see why they shouldn't be invited. I'm not saying we should forget what happened in 1976, but I am saying we should invite all people. There shouldn't be any discrimination in the Olympics. Sport is sport, not politics."

Sonny Marlen, Granite City

"No, I don't think the Palestinians should be invited. They're terrorists, revolutionists. I can't see the point or what good would come by inviting them."

Joyce Dillard, Pantown Beach

"Sure, why not invite them. Most of them are just ordinary people. Their outlook may be different than ours or other nations, but that's what's different about the world. The difference in nations is what helps make the Olympics as great as it is. No, the PLO shouldn't be excluded. The Olympics are not supposed to be a political thing."

Church groups have much to offer youth

To the Editor,

We represent the youth of the First Baptist Church in Granite City. We recently have been having bake sales at various stores and are selling candles so our youth may work for their own summer activities monies. We are very proud of these young people, they are hard workers.

We want very much to recognize the importance of the many people who bought from our kids and the stores who let us set up shop on their property. Without their help and support, it could not have been possible.

Police dance held without mayor's support

To the Editor,

In the March 15 issue of the Granite City Press-Record Madison Mayor Mike Sasysk stated at a recent city council meeting that he wished more organizations like the Madison Ladies Democratic Club would do something constructive for the community of Madison, other than be critical and have a ax to grind with the present city administration.

Mayor Sasysk seems to forget that this organization that he praises is also controlled by him, and also raises several thousand dollars, each year for his campaigns and other loyal politicians that he deems worthy of support.

An organization that he chooses to forget about, but works very hard for the Tri-City area and our community which donates the profits from their annual police dance is the Police Benevolent and Protective Association, Unit 110, of Madison.

Mayor Sasysk attempts to discredit the PB&PA Unit 110 and, during this last year, informed Police Chief Donald L. Bridick that he didn't want the police unit to solicit advertisements or have our annual dance. No reason was given to me for his decision, however, it is quite simple to figure out, since Mayor Sasysk can't control our organization and especially our treasury.

on Madison Avenue and we have helped numerous needy families and organizations during difficult times.

Some of the other programs to which we contribute are the Madison school system safety program, where we buy all the bicycles, the Madison Junior Service Club's Christmas program, Operation Snowball (a drug awareness program for high school students), and we send needy children to the Shrine Circus, plus give them spending money for candy while the program is on.

We also are the proud sponsor of Explorer Post 10-4, a law enforcement specialty post open to the youth of the Quad-City area, which is nationally known in Scouting circles as one of the finest posts in the country. This post, which was founded by Walter F. "Mick" Strange, used to meet at the police department, but after Mick's unsuccessful bid for public office, which was against an incumbent alderman that Mayor Sasysk supported, the Explorers were notified that their meeting room was being renovated and made room for a city of Madison public museum.

After the Explorer's changed their meeting place, their meeting room was converted into new office space for the city alarm director.

The list of organizations, which is too lengthy to name all, that have benefited from our donations has probably not been exceeded by any other organization in our community and, I must admit, we should be proud of all the various worthwhile groups we have in our city.

But the bottom line to the story is that a majority of the members of our Benevolent Unit will not participate in the Madison City Organization and Mayor Sasysk chooses to abhorish the policeman because of their unwillingness to succumb to his desires.

I encourage all area residents to attend our upcoming police dance being held on Friday, May 4, at the new Annets Hall and show your support for this fine organization, so we can again have a successful dance.

HAS PRAISE FOR THE COMPASSION OF COSTOFF

To the Editor:

This letter is being written about a very outstanding person the citizens of Madison are fortunate enough to have living in their midst. Fair, good hearted, sharing, giving, loving understanding and caring for those who have, as well as those who have not.

It is rare indeed to find all these admirable qualities in just one person, Christ Costoff.

We feel honored by far to have been called friends by him. Just to let you know how proud we are to know you and have your friendship.

Granite City Council to study sewage agreement

Granite City aldermen will meet in a special session at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the Granite City Township Hall, 200 Delmar Ave., to review a tentative agreement for a regional wastewater treatment system.

Mayor Paul Schuler told the council last week that the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has given the various regional partners, including Madison and Venice, until March 31 to approve the tentative agreement.

According to Schuler, the latest form of the agreement contains few changes from a previous copy that calls for a 12-member regional treatment board. The contract would bind Granite City into receiving certain waste volume limits from the Metro-East Sanitary District, Glen Carbon and Madison County until 2005.

Last week the various entities received confirmation from the IEPA that they will receive 75 percent funding to ready their sites for the regional system.

In other business last week, First Ward Alderman Casmer Skubish, air pollution committee chairman, made a formal motion to delete the 1984-85 city budget. Skubish said the motion was in response to the council's refusal to seek funding for the department.

Only one full-time air pollution department employee remains, but his work has consisted mainly of engineering duties. Skubish said that employee may be transferred to the Engineering Department.

Sixth Ward Alderman Stephen Salitch, cable committee chairman, presented the council with a letter of protest from the Social Service Network objecting to a request by South-Western Cable TV, Inc., for SNN to pay for the production and airing of its half-hour public service program.

The group of 31 agencies said restricted budgets would keep SNN from continuing its program, if the charges were enforced. City Attorney John Papa has informed the cable company that his interpretation of the cable franchise does not allow for such types of charges.

Garnishments against two agencies who aided EOC

Acting on a request by the Bank of Alton, Friday, Associate Judge Thomas Hildebrand issued garnishment summonses against two Illinois agencies, who had administered and assessed Economic Opportunity Commission (EOC) funds.

Garnishments went against the Illinois Association of Community Action Agencies, which is helping the EOC locate and assess its property to file for bankruptcy, and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, which administered EOC funds before a general shutdown of the program last December.

Hildebrand said the bank was allowed to request garnishment because of a prior $114,000 judgment awarded the bank against the EOC.

Hearst Co. applies for TV operators license

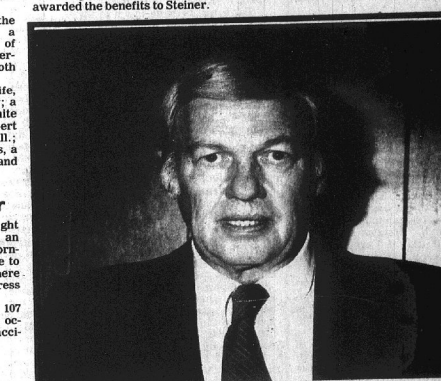

Hearst Corporation, owner of the Edwardsville Intelligencer, has applied for a license to operate low-power television channels, which would serve nearly all of Madison County and part of the St. Louis area. The application is contingent on Federal Communications Commission approval.

Hearst, a New York based communication company, has applied for channels 58 and 64 here, and channels in other cities where it owns property.

If the company receives approval, it will set up a studio at the Intelligencer office.

A Trojan Era Draws To An End Hoages: Madison's underrated assistant coach Says He Won't Coach Next Year

SPORTS EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a two-part series which began last Monday on how basketball is changing—perhaps entering a different era—in the Quad-City area. This story deals partly with the highly successful Madison High School basketball program and where it may be headed.

By ALAN L. GERSTENECKER
Sports Editor
of the Press-Record

David R. Hoages entered the newsroom last week wearing an expensive-looking, expertly-tailored black suit. His shoes were befitting the outfit. He wore a shiny, dark, double-breasted jacket with a thin, black hair and mustache were neat and meticulously combed.

After initial greetings and shedding the overcoat, Hoages selected a seat and began to discuss stocks and investments with an inquisitive reporter. He discussed investments with the enthusiasm and intensity of a seasoned Wall Street investor. He mentored information collected off his lips much like tape out of ticker tape machine.

SOMEHOW, it all seemed odd of character—not for Hoages—but it did seem odd for an assistant basketball coach to be discussing stocks, dividends and insurance company investments.

Hoages, however, made it clear early. As much as he loves basketball and coaching the game, his life and livelihood is financial planning—selling stock and investing money.

He was a teacher in the Madison School District for nearly 20 years before he made the transition from educator to investor.

A teacher at Dunbar Elementary School, he taught and coached basketball there for four years before he was offered the assistant basketball coach position in 1981 at Madison High School under recently hired coach Larry Graham. He met Graham earlier that year playing team basketball at the Tri-City Area YMCA.

ALTHOUGH coaching at the high school, he continued teaching sixth- and eighth-grade children at Dunbar Elementary.

Finally, in 1972 he was offered a position at the high school teaching social studies—history and sociology. It was a position he'd long wanted, but in five years at the high school he became disillusioned with the pay and wanted out.

So in June 1977, when the school closed its doors for summer vacation, Hoages bade farewell to teaching and began his second career, selling stock and investing money.

"I saw the money that others outside of teaching were making with a lot less education. I felt like I was worth more than I was getting paid."

"Besides, I began to feel a pinch, a money pinch," Hoages said. "I've always felt that if I was anywhere somewhere it affects my performance. And in teaching, especially teaching, if someone's not performing well they should get out. Why cripple those around you because you're not performing well?"

HODGES' jump from teaching to the investment profession eventually landed him in the Webster Groves, Mo., office of Investors Diversified Services, Inc., now a subsidiary of American Express.

The transition was not a smooth one, Hoages said, but it was right for him.

"Had it not been for my wife and her working, I would have starved to death in the early going," Hoages said. "But like many things, the more time you put into it, the more benefits you reap from it."

Being black, Hoages believes the investment business may have been more difficult for him initially. Growing up in a blue collar environment, investing money was something that was not commonly practiced, he said. Consequently, in addition to "selling" investments, he also had to "educate" a lot of his clients of the advantages of investing rather than just banking their savings.

AS HIS knowledge of investing grew so did his duties at IDS. Simultaneously, he managed to find the time to remain as the Trojan's assistant coach. His decision to keep coaching, he said, was the transition that helped him make the transition from educator to investor.

"This business requires a lot of time and the more you spend, the more I realized the similarities between investing and teaching and coaching," Hoages said.

"As a personal financial planner, I begin with a little capital and hopefully build it into a successfully strong estate. The same is done with a basketball team," he said. "You start the first day with a group of guys with a common interest and then, with good advice and sound coaching, you build a team."

"You define your goals and plans and then adhere to the plans devised to get you to the goal. You see, it's really very similar to coaching."

INVESTING, like basketball, should you waiver from the game plan the result can be catastrophic.

Estates and successful basketball programs are not made overnight. Each are slow, well-planned processes which, if continued on track, will eventually reap great benefits," Hoages said.

Understandably, Hoages said, there are also differences in coaching and investing. The obvious, he said, is in the kind of people that are dealt with. "The obvious differences are the people involved," Hoages said. "That and the emotional difference."

"I do like to think that the peoples' lives I've touched in both coaching

"On the floor, I try to remain calm. In the heat of a game you have to remain calm. You've got to be empty calm. If you're not calm, you can't really expect your athletes to play calm and relaxed."

As good a game coach Hoages is, he prefers to be termed a good practice coach. "There are a lot of good bench coaches, but I prefer to be known as a good practice coach. In a game, you're simply the coach, calling from the sidelines."

In practice you're more than just a bench coach. You're the coach, the spectator and the referee. You're the man. If you're a good practice coach, it's easy to be a good bench coach," Hoages said.

FOR 15 YEARS Hoages has been Madison's assistant varsity basketball coach.

There was a time when all he wanted was the head basketball coach's position at Madison. In fact, he was one of the applicants when the position was open. He was eventually awarded the job. Instead, Hoages was named the assistant.

There was a time when coaching provided a kind of escape for him, an escape from the hectic world of investing. There was a time when he needed him.

But now, things are different. For 15 years, he was Madison's assistant varsity basketball coach

"I tell my guys that basketball, in many respects, is a lot like life. Failure is not fatal and success is not final. One success does make a lifetime."

and investing are better now because of what I may have contributed."

WHEN IT comes to contributing to the success of the Madison basketball program, Hoages is not lost for words when it comes to Hoages.

"Dave has been so much to these kids, all of Madison's athletes. He has the uncanny ability to relate to high school kids on their own level. That relationship both teaches and disciplines," Graham said. "I couldn't have asked for a better, more complete assistant coach."

Assessing his own talents, Hoages modestly says he's a better coach than he is a basketball fan. "My first love is basketball. I'm a basketball junky and I enjoy both aspects of it, coaching and watching," Hoages said.

"WHENEVER I'm a much better coach than I am a fan. When I'm coaching I seldom get rattled. And when I go to the game, I go as a fan. I go for the show. I go to watch the guys play. I go to see the guy with the popcorn in the top row," Hoages said jokingly.

Larry Graham's assistant. He was an anonymity, behind the highly successful Graham.

THAT runner-up status, however, has never bothered Hoages. He's never been one to seek the limelight. Being the unknown Madison assistant is something he's adjusted to without much problem.

"I know what I've contributed to the Madison basketball program. I'm very secure in my own mind what I've contributed to Madison's success," Hoages said.

"Larry's the coach. He's a very solid coach and we've always liked each other. There were times when we didn't always agree, but that happens with every team. It's what makes a good team."

Now, with Graham leaving Madison to accept the head basketball coaches' position at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, it would seem he's a shoe-in for the top position.

BUT AS times change so do wants and desires. He's developing his business into a very successful one. The success demands much of his time.

In few words, he is not a candidate for the position vacated by Graham. "My business has gotten to the point where I need to spend each moment concentrating on it. I tried to quit a couple of years ago, but Larry talked me out of it," he said.

"I guess he (Graham) knew, we both knew, when he quit Madison so would I."

When Graham was swamped by reporters after the Trojans' loss to the Charleston Super-Sectional, Hoages sat on the bleachers by himself. Although the formal announcement of Graham's appointment to the SIU position was still a day away, the media was already calling the Trojans' loss to the Wolves Graham's last game as the Trojans' mentor.

AS IT turns out, it was also Hoages'.

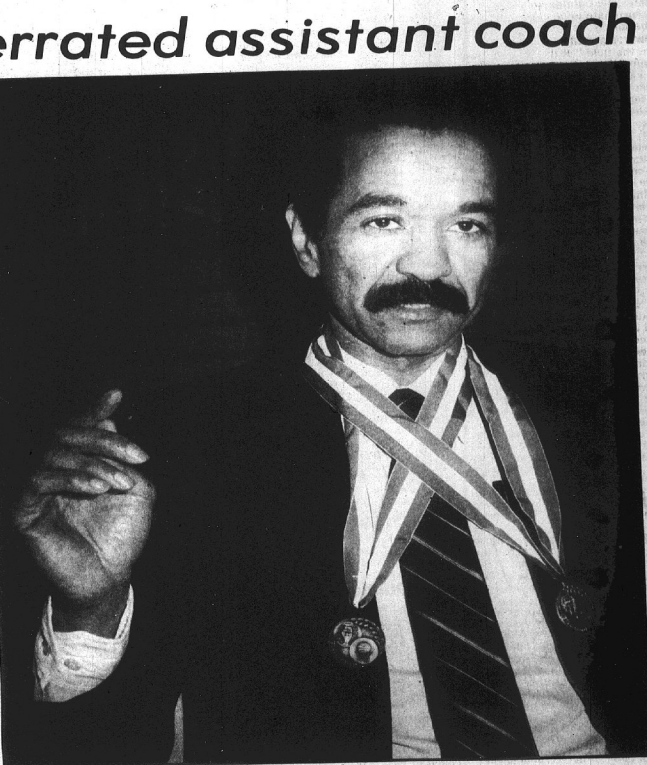

JUST AS the Vandalla Sectional victory over Weeslin was Graham's 30th, so was it Hoages'. Indeed, it was the end of an era.

As the Trojans turn the page on a brilliant 15 years, they begin to look to the future, past the Graham-Hoages era.

John Falchett, the Madison Superintendent of Schools, announced last Tuesday that his office accepting applications to fill the vacancies in the coaching staff.

Despite the loss of Madison's basketball coaches, Dan Kostenick, Madison High School principal, said last week that he is confident that the Madison tradition will continue.

"MADISON had a fine basketball tradition before Graham and I'm sure it will continue after he's gone. It wasn't superior, as it is now, but there were some fine teams and athletes who represented the Trojans."

Dave Hoages

As for both Graham and Hoages, it was easy for Kostenick to come up with compliments.

"For starters, they were probably the best coaching duo at Madison," Kostenick began. "Larry's done so much for us. We're really going to miss him."

"As for Dave, I think he is really underrated as a coach. He's a fine coach and a fine man. He's very intelligent and it seems as though he knew how to bring the best out in the kids."

HODGES said that's just about the way he wants to be remembered as the Trojans' assistant.

A 1957 graduate of Madison High who represented the Trojans on the hardwood, Hoages said although he was hired to coach basketball, he tried to teach much more than that.

"I tell my guys that basketball, in many respects, is a lot like life. Failure is not fatal and success is not final. One success does make a lifetime."

Although he won't be coaching the Trojans next year, that doesn't mean Hoages won't be seen at the game. He'll be there enjoying the sport he loves so much.

Just look for the loud guy with the popcorn, way in the back.

Tennis, Baseball, Track Rainouts delay some Warrior debuts

Granite City High School's spring sports teams will attempt to resume their season today after a weekend of rainouts.

All three events, scheduled Saturday—track, baseball and tennis—were canceled or postponed because of the rain-soaked playing surfaces.

For the Warrior baseball team, Saturday's double-header against Washington was slated to be its season opener. The Warriors' second outing of the season was scheduled for this afternoon against the Shells in Roxana, but that too has been cancelled because of a wet playing field.

Likewise, coach Dick Harmon's tennis team did not debut Saturday either. The Warriors, slated to meet Belleville East at 10:30 a.m. and then Belleville West at 1:30 p.m., did not even take to the courts Saturday before the matches were cancelled.

The Warriors are, however, scheduled to meet Belleville East this afternoon in a rescheduled match-up in Belleville at 4 p.m. The pairing with Belleville West has not been rescheduled.

Should today's match also be cancelled due to the weather, the Warriors will not take to the courts again until April 2 when they host Gateway East Conference rival Cahokia for their home debut.

Of all three teams scheduled for action Saturday, the Warrior track team was the only team to compete. Competing in truly their first outdoor meet of the season, the Warrior thincleds were well represented in the winners column before the meet was postponed.

Competing in the 12-team Hazelwood East meet, the Warriors won the 600 meter relay and were well represented in the handful of field events also.

Winning the 600 relay were Jeff Hoese, Darren Bernaia, Ken Kalka and Jim Robinson. Field events in which the Warriors excelled were the high jump and discus. Junior Eric Graves won the high jump while Paul Ballew captured top prize in the discus.

Contacted at home, Warrior Coach Pete Robinson did not have meet results thus far, but the Press-Record will have the results on today's continued meet in Thursday's issue.

In Super-Sectional Collinsville bows to Benton, 60-52

By JIM SCHLUETER
for the Press-Record

CARBONDALE—In a few words, the Kahok basketball team simply came up short against Benton in the Carbondale Super-Sectional Tuesday night at the SIU Arena. The Kahoks' exit of the state tournament leaves Southwestern Illinois without a representative in the state tournament.

The Kahoks' shots came up short, a late comeback effort came up short, and Collinsville's drive to defeat previously undefeated Evanson, 53-47 Saturday night in the Illinois Class AA state basketball championships.

Earlier Friday, Evanson topped downstate representative Benton in the quarterfinals to advance to the semi's. Benton, last Thursday, defeated Collinsville, somewhat of a Cinderella team in post-season play.

Simeon, which finished the season 30-1, has perhaps one of the largest high school teams ever represented in the state tournament. The Wolverines starting five consisted of two 6-foot 4-inch guards, two forwards

Simeon nabs AA crown

CHAMPAIGN—Chicago Simeon of the Chicago Public High League used good speed and a lot of height to defeat previously undefeated Evanson, 53-47 Saturday night in the Illinois Class AA state basketball championships.

Earlier Friday, Evanson topped downstate representative Benton in the quarterfinals to advance to the semi's. Benton, last Thursday, defeated Collinsville, somewhat of a Cinderella team in post-season play.

Simeon, which finished the season 30-1, has perhaps one of the largest high school teams ever represented in the state tournament. The Wolverines starting five consisted of two 6-foot 4-inch guards, two forwards listed at 6-foot 5-inches and 6-foot 7-inches and a center, Rodney Hull, also listed at 6-foot 7-inches tall.

The All-Tournament team consisted of 6-foot 2-inch Everett Stephens of Evanson, 6-foot 6-inch Keny Battle of Aurora West, 6-foot 7-inch Benjamin Wilson of Simeon, 6-foot 5-inch Chris Funchess of St. Joseph and 6-foot 7-inch Bruce Baker of Benton.

Aurora West's Battle was the top point getter in the tournament with 86 points in his four games, nearly a 22 point average.

Benton's big man, Baker, grabbed the top scoring average, 25.5 points a game, although competing in just two games.

Divided, activist board is shaking up schools, educators

By BILL WINTER
of the Press-Record

Still subject to change tomorrow night, the Granite City school district's organizational structure nevertheless will be much different July 1 than now.

The staffing outlook is hard to predict with any precision because of differences of opinion on the board, and the board's sometimes sudden shifts.

Any one of the four who are now in control could change his or her mind, altering both already-scheduled and pending revisions.

AS NOTED, a "new look" seems certain in the 1984-85 year. Many members of the American Federation of Teachers feel it will be an improvement.

They were instrumental in electing the four who have been reshaping the district since November. They are not, however, "calling all the shots," nor does any one group deserve all the praise or criticism for the new approach.

Some citizens look at the district in March 1984 and see turmoil, which they call disruptive and destructive—a glaring example of how not to run a school system, a railroad or anything else. Others are happy over what is happening.

KEY FIGURES include Superintendent of Schools B.J. Davis, Director of Finance Norman Owca, School Treasurer Kelly Hogan and Board Member Alan R. Crider. More about them later in this analytical article.

Key factors include board activism, staff isolation, image concerns, animosity and pressure tactics.

Presidential candidates may be asking "Where's the beef?" this year, but the key question in the school district is "Who's in charge?"

To observers inside and outside the district, the most dramatic change in the past four months has been a decrease in harmony between the board and administrative staff.

Because of distrust of the people or their skills, there has been a concerted effort to detain around present school administrators.

BOARD MEMBERS who could not possibly have had first-hand knowledge of what they were discussing have shown total faith in the accuracy of their information and the wisdom of their proposals. (All references in this article are to public statements and actions.)

They obviously have had input from persons they know and believe, and it is not the purpose of this article to judge the input as right or wrong.

But the vantage points from which advice is offered vary. It is possible for several employees or several students or several parents, each speaking truthfully and accurately, to have greatly differing perceptions of a person, event or condition.

Acting on information they had confidence in—and sometimes avoiding hearing other versions—board members have gone far beyond policy-setting.

They have taken drastic actions with no more official discussion than a few introductory words followed by "I make a motion."

THE CONCEPT of shared authority being vested in seven persons only when they are around their meeting table has not been respected. Board members interact with the school system regularly, in differing and sometimes unprecedented ways.

The concept of committees having no authority except to gather information and advise the seven-member board has been circumvented.

The concept of the superintendent or someone he designates being a member of any and all committees has been pointedly ignored.

The concept of obtaining research-enlightened administrative recommendations has not been well utilized.

THIS IS NOT TO SAY that board members are doing everything wrong. And some devote a vast amount of time to school matters.

They are not uncaring. In their fashion, they want District Nine to be a good district.

But some may have informal agendas in mind, along with the orange-colored formal agenda—checklists of peripheral goals to achieve, of scores to settle, of individuals to please or displease.

The 9,180-student school district stands wounded today, nearly all of the wounds inflicted with good intentions. The pain will continue until the board or whoever is responsible for it stops inflicting it.

EVEN WITH its wounds, the system is functioning. Its talented staff—classroom teachers and those in all other service, operating and managerial categories—is doing a fine job, bearing a heavy workload, and turning out well-educated students.

But some persons have undertaken roles assigned to paid, full-time educators, if you believe your eyes and the words of school personnel.

With nearly everybody feeling free to talk to nearly everyone about nearly every topic—except for instances in which an effort has been made to not hear an opinion—channels for efficient procedures have been ignored.

BITS OF FACTS and assumptions have been spliced together, and conclusions reached. Except in mathematics classes—where such an answer always is four—the "two and two" put together by some of those in authority have added up to much more, or much less.

We have not detected a villain. At worst, some people have been misguided. But there are Granite Cityans willing to point a finger at whichever people or circumstances they think are causing difficulty. News coverage is viewed by some as creating or worsening problems.

THIS SURELY is not desired by the media, which has its share of imperfections but, along with school people, has good intentions. The wish to have good government is what motivates news men and women to try to mirror governmental actions. For democracy to flourish, alert and aware citizens are essential. Many positive things, as well as negatives, have been reported. Positive examples are today's reporting of the high school's determination to continue North Central accreditation and the district's fight against drug and alcohol abuse. But some officials are almost in despair over the less than positive stories; they are so unhappy with the messenger, as well as the news brought by the messenger, that they want to retaliate for alleged errors and distortions.

IN PARTIAL rebuttal, it could be said that a poor public image, if it exists, may stem from the fact that the district is in turmoil. Not tumult, that has been dreamed up and falsely reported, but tumult that exists.

Certainly, those who wish to amplify their ideas on what is happening, or should happen, have full access to the Press-Record news columns, as has always been the case. There was resentment over an article on the "reign of terror" affecting the administrative staff.

Many in a position to know still say that the "reign" is exactly what has been in progress. There has been so much saber-rattling, so much pressure, that anxiety and other physical symptoms have manifested themselves.

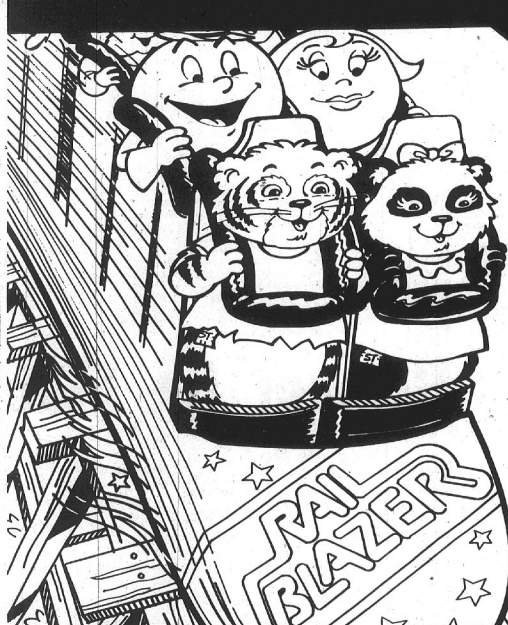

The large number of resignations and early retirements have not developed only because generous benefits were offered. Some decided this winter that the work environment was not one they wanted to be associated with. We have talked in depth with some of these people.

ORDER is voiced from everywhere, "everybody in town acting as my boss," with insecurity now omnipresent—such a situation is not conducive to a happy, productive staff.

Regardless of one's vantage point, there is no simple solution. Certainly, the big debt that has developed is a serious problem that worsens and inflames virtually all other concerns.

Continues debate on electric shop's motors

John Petish Jr., a Granite Cityan who describes himself as a "concerned citizen and taxpayer," is continuing his attack on the Granite City school district's handling of vocational education.

Delivering his third talk to the Board of Education in recent weeks, Petish last week repeated his request that the board answer two questions:

1. "Who gave the authorization to dismantle and remove the vocational electric shop from the vocational building (at Granite City High School)?"
2. "In a telephone conversation after the Citizens Advisory Council tour of the high school Jan. 26 (why I told), 'We got advice from experts and decided the equipment was old and needed updating.' 'This electrical equipment is not outdated any more than it was in the 1950s,' Petish said.

"Shortly after this folly, a similar motor generator set was acquired from a local industry," he added while displaying a photograph.

"Regarding developments in the 20th Century, by the 1950s most of the major features of the electric motor and its associated equipment had been invented."

"Further refinements were made during the 20th Century. For example, motors were extensively introduced in automatic control systems."

"However, these changes were mainly a sophistication of machinery rather than a departure from the basics and foundation already laid."

Petish told the Press-Record, "The picture shows a shunt motor that was claimed to be old and obsolete. It was dismantled and misplaced."

"Yet, shortly thereafter one was borrowed or donated to the school. It is also a shunt motor, Allis Chalmers 5 kw, 1,750 rpm, 230-480 volts, half the size and capacity and just as old if not older."

He said he feels it is important to reply to letters that were in the school board's March 6 agenda.

James R. Hankins, assistant business manager of Local 309, Illinois Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said GCHS electrical instruction is headed in the "right direction."

He wrote, "We presently have several Granite City vocational students in our training program, and several have recently become journeymen. They are among our finest craftsmen."

Robert D. Skinner, Granite City Steel electrical test supervisor, said this month in reply to a February letter critical of the GCHS electrical facilities:

"It is good there is concern for our school system by individuals other than just the teaching staff. It is unfortunate, however, that they have not kept themselves up-to-date on the progress of technology. If they had, there would not have been unfounded criticism."

"I am happy that the shortcomings of the automotive shop were recognized by persons other than myself. I was one of the first to voice my disappointment at the condition of the new automotive shop area—especially the inability to get vehicles into the shop area."

"This problem was well addressed in the article (Feb. 23 Press-Record), and I agree that something must be done to alleviate the situation quickly. I was, however, very much surprised at (the verbal) misrepresentation of conditions existing in the other vocational shop areas, mainly the electrical and electronic programs."

"These programs are very strong and can stand on their own merit. 'They offer some of the best training available anywhere,' the steel plant's electronics research and development laboratory official said."

"References to loss of equipment from the old, outdated shop complex are totally without merit."

"Most of the equipment mentioned was obsolete when I passed through the vocational electric shop as a student 30 years ago. At that time, little or no use was made of much of this old equipment."

"We have come through several generations of electrical progress. We have put a man on the moon."

"Computers control our lives. Modern medicine keeps us healthy. And teaching methods have changed."

"Steam engines, bloodletting and 30 amp electrical house wiring are all a thing of the past, like it or not."

"I feel that you and your teaching staff should make an effort to explain to the uninformed how really good your electrical and electronics programs are compared to a brief few years ago."

"I commend you and say, 'Keep up the good work.'"

In writing Thomas C. Holloway, Granite City school district director through this June 30, Hankins of the Electrical Workers said, "Allow me to give my background in order that you may understand my qualifications to discuss the vocational electricity course offered at Granite City High School."

"I attended GCHS from September 1961 through graduation in June 1964. In 1961-62, I took unit electricity I and II. In my junior year, I majored in vocational electricity I and II."

"In my senior year, 1963-64, I majored in vocational electricity III and IV, taught by Max Forbes."

"In September 1967 I was indentured as an apprentice wireman in the Joint Apprenticeship and Training Committee."

"I worked as an apprentice and attended night classes at IBEW Local 309, graduated to journeyman wireman in July 1971 and was regularly employed as a journeyman until appointed to my present position as assistant business manager in August 1977."

"In 1974, I became apprentice instructor and served in that position for three years."

"In my case, unit electricity was my introduction to the electrical industry. This class ignited my enthusiasm, and I decided to take vocational electricity."

"Mr. Forbes became the instructor in 1964-65 and has provided guidance to help them decide what direction they should go."

"Forty years ago, the electrical industry was still new and the basics I taught at that time were mechanical in nature. Companies didn't provide the specialized training then that they do now."

"Today, the electrical industry is so vast and varied that you cannot expect to train your people in any one job, let alone several," Hankins said.

"Students must be taught the basic building blocks, such as direct current theory and alternating current theory."

"They must expand that into the study and uses of transformers for transmission by utilities, or motors for industries."

"The basics of motor control must be touched on, but they must be familiarized with logic motor control and semi-conductors."

"Students must become literate, to a degree, on these subjects. They cannot be expected to learn everything they must know to begin a job in industry. Rather, you must ignite that enthusiasm in them to pursue a particular field."

"Forty years ago, simply teaching students how to disassemble a motor and reassemble a motor may have been important. But, today, they must have more."

"Educators have found that on-the-job training does not provide the best journeyman and, likewise, qualified journeymen are not trained in the classroom alone."

"The very finest journeymen are produced by on-the-job training, supported by organized classroom studies."

"We know, now, that it takes a total of about six years of full-time work supplemented by four years of classroom study to train a journeyman."

"Your vocational training class is going in the right direction by teaching basics and introducing students to the various branches of the electrical industry. Don't go backwards now. The guest speakers and field trips are every bit as important to the students as the hands-on mechanical work," Hankins concluded.

The Board of Education acknowledged a letter that was being sent by Vocational Director Holloway to the Tri-City Trades and Labor Council, AFL-CIO, as the school board's reply to a letter discussed at the Feb. 21 meeting.

Holloway wrote, "I am in receipt of your recent letter to the Granite City Board of Education concerning the condition of our electrical and automotive shops and have been asked to respond to your concerns."

"The vocational department has always felt that the relationship we share with local unions has made our progress a step ahead of those in other areas and hope that we can continue this working relationship."

"The electrical shop has not been blotted out, but has been moved to the shop that was previously the radio and television shop. This was necessary because of the closing of North High School."

"With this closing, we had to find room at South High (Granite City High School) to house two vocational programs that were at North."

"Since we could not put the auto shop in the radio-TV shop, the electrical shop was moved there, not abolished."

"While footage was maintained, while lighting and physical surroundings were improved. The new shop has dropped ceilings, fluorescent lights and a tile floor."

"Due to the closing of North High, we had three months in which to establish a new location for the automotive shop. Many areas of the GCHS campus were considered, including the gymnasium, vocal and band room, as well as the out building now being used by the apprentice bricklayers."

"None of these were implemented because to do so would have lowered the quality of other programs. Therefore, the decision was made to establish a temporary facility in the electrical shop."

"We were well aware at the time that automobiles could not be brought in the shop and that the quality of the program would revert back to that of the early years of North."

"This was a necessary choice, not an ideal one. But, considering the financial condition of the district, it was the only choice we had at the time."

"Students do not work on the soccer field. The auto shop is equipped with engines on stands, but on nice days they work on cars on the asphalt outside the classroom."

"The Board of Education has authorized the establishment of a special Automotive Advisory Council to study this situation and make recommendation to the board for improving this vocational program."

"Regarding the suggestion to transfer the auto shop to an outlying building, the only outlying building is the one now under contract with Bricklayers Union Local 65. It would be too small for an automotive shop."

"All usable equipment that has been moved to its new location."

"The Granite City school district evaluates one or more vocational programs on an annual basis. The Vocational Advisory Council, made up of citizens with expertise in the field, evaluates a program and makes recommendations for updating both the curriculum and equipment necessary to teach a quality program."

"Just last year, the Council evaluated our vocational electricity program and made recommendations to the Board of Education. The board as a result of these recommendations purchased in excess of $7,000 of instructional electrical equipment to update this program."

"As mentioned, the board at its Feb. 21 meeting authorized the establishment of an automotive council. We ask your organization to send members from the automotive field to participate on this council."

DCCA grant deadline is April 17

The Department of Commerce and Community Affairs (DCCA) has established an April 17 deadline for submitting economic development applications under the agency's Community Development Assistance Program (CDAP). DCCA Director Michael T. Woelfer announced Wednesday.

"We have just completed an exhaustive review of our entire CDAP program, and a major change we have made is to conduct the competitive economic development phase on a quarterly rather than an annual basis," Woelfer said.

"The chief reason for this is that good economic development deals come up regularly, not just once a year."

Tentative application deadlines for subsequent economic development CDAP cycles are June 18, Sept. 17 and Dec. 17. CDAP dollars go to localities with populations of 50,000 or less.

Woelfer said DCCA expects to spend $10,177,350—or an average of $2,544,337 per quarter—on competitive economic development applications. "Of course, this quarterly figure is flexible, and will be adjusted depending on the number of applications we receive each time."

But it now looks like we will have more applications than we can fund this first quarter."

DCCA expects to get a grand total of $35,015,000 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for CDAP activities, compared to $33,495,000 received a year ago.

"Once again, we will also have a competitive program in the area of public facilities and housing, but we're holding up details of this annual program until we can coordinate our plans next month with those of the Illinois Department of Finance."

Authority which will be responsible for implementing the governor's bonding pool proposal to help communities build or improve their infrastructure," Woelfer said.

DCCA has earmarked $12,177,350 for the public facilities and housing category of CDAP. The agency also is planning to use $7 million for unique economic development opportunities or to respond to natural disasters which may be available on a case-by-case basis.

Woelfer said CDAP dollars will go to two new areas this year—the Central Business District Development Program ($1 million) and the Small Business Fixed Rate Financing Program ($2 million), designed to make working capital and other capital available to businesses at below market interest rates.

"We have set ceilings of $500,000 per project for economic development, $500,000 for public facilities and housing, $250,000 for set-aside projects, $50,000 for the central business district program and $100,000 for small business fixed rate loans," said Woelfer.

Woelfer said grants under the Central Business District Development Program will be made on an annual competitive basis (application deadline July 2). The fixed rate loan program will be made on a case-by-case basis.

Her cake was later served to the group, after members tried their hand at decorating.

The next regular meeting will be held in the home of Lora Mae Lombardi.

It was noted that the lesson on smoking presented by Mrs. Joyce Tracy at the Nameoki United Methodist Church was well attended and enjoyed by all. Equally enjoyable was the treat of ice cream at Strawberry Hill.

The business meeting was adjourned and dessert was served by Mrs. Haldeman to Delores Byrnes, Imogene Forrest, Lora Mae Lombardi, Norma Rains, Jane Stevens, Ruth Stoyanoff, Evelyn Tolliver and Juanita Calvo.

Q: I've made a sizable increase in income over the past year. A friend advised to use the income averaging method of calculating my federal income tax. From the way he described it, and from what I've read, I believe that this method would be very much to my advantage. The only problem is I need my tax records for the past three years. They turned up missing in a move. What can I do?

A: Income averaging is sometimes a very advantageous method of easing the federal tax burden for persons who realize substantial income increases in a single year. You will, however, need previous tax records and, for a fee, the Internal Revenue Service will supply you with needed photocopies. Single copies are $5, and are generally available for the past six years. The necessary form for securing copies of past tax records, as well as additional information can be obtained from your local Internal Revenue Service office. The form to request is a Request for Copy of Tax Form, Number 4506.

SIUE student experiences life of Eskimo first-hand

By JANET L. ADAMS

Remember the childhood tales of the Eskimos? We all thought they lived in igloos made of ice blocks and wore parkas as everyday clothing. Barbara Albrecht, a resident of Metro-East Illinois, wanted to find out first-hand what the Eskimos were really like.

What she found was similar to the childhood tales. They do wear parkas, but they don't live in ice houses. Actually they live in wooden houses complete with electricity. Mrs. Albrecht, a student and occasional lecturer at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, has lived with the Inuit Eskimos in Alaska for three winters.

MRS. ALBRECHT first journeyed to the north to visit relatives in Anchorage and decided to see what else was in the big state of Alaska. That's when she came upon the Inuits. Her compassion for the Eskimos led her to begin research on their past existence and lifestyle today. She researched their lifestyle from the time they crossed the Bering Strait from Siberia to Alaska, which was about 15,000 years ago.

Her research was funded by a grant she received from the American Association of university women.

"I'VE ALWAYS felt the Eskimos were not properly portrayed. I think more people should know how they survive over the centuries in their cold environment," she said. During Mrs. Albrecht's visits, she had to bring canned and prepared foods with her. "I was unable to subsist on their diet just as they could not live on mine. I planned extensively before I went. I did try their food... mukluk (whale) meat tastes exactly like eating rubber, with it getting bigger each time you chew." On her first stay with the Eskimos, Mrs. Albrecht brought candy to share with the Eskimo children. Contrary to popular belief, the Eskimo children do not enjoy candy. They wouldn't even accept it.

A BIG FAVORITE with Eskimos is canned peaches. They order food once a year from Anchorage. The food is either shipped in or flown to them. "Above anything else, the Eskimos love canned peaches," Mrs. Albrecht said.

Mrs. Albrecht found the Eskimos way of life to be drastically different from ours. "Those people mainly live for food... to be warm and not to experience any unhappiness. It's very simple. They want to keep their heritage."

Whaling is the one way they are able to retain their heritage. "They use a oomiak (boat) to do their hunting for food. They mainly hunt the bow head whale which grows to 50-60 feet in length, with each foot weighing a ton," she said.

THE WHALE HUNT is a ceremonious celebration. After they kill the whale, they bring it back to be prepared for storage in cellars in the ground. Since the ground is frozen, it's a natural refrigerator.

Mrs. Albrecht is hoping to finish her book in the next month or so. The book focuses on the environmental impact of the Alaskan Eskimo. Because of her studies, she has been in great demand to share her information. She does so by giving lectures to various classes at SIUE and to groups in the community.

THE FIRST contact she made with SIUE was by taking a course through the Continuing Education program. She made friends with Reba Klenke, the program's coordinator, and Mrs. Klenke introduced her to Theodore Frisbie, professor of anthropology. Frisbie became interested in her work and asked her to share her experiences in his classes.

When giving a lecture, Mrs. Albrecht brings along her momentos from the Eskimos. She has parkas, boots, tools, and decorative items, all hand-made. She always brings along her map of Alaska to point out where the Inuits live. And she has dozens of slides of animals, houses, clothing and the Inuits themselves to show during her presentation.

"My experience with them has confirmed my belief that the Eskimos are creative, ingenious, intelligent and extremely happy people. And they would not want to leave their home and live anywhere else in the world," she said.

MOST OF HER time now is spent finishing her book on the Eskimos and lecturing to various groups. Beginning April 5, she will teach a series of classes entitled, "Magic Carpet to Alaska" at the Eden Village Care Center in Edwardsville. The classes will meet on Thursdays from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. She teaches the series through the Metro-East Institute of Lifelong Learning on a volunteer basis. The series is open to the public. In her spare time, she is enrolled in a German class at the university and spends a lot of time carving wood in her home in Bethalto.

Foundation donates $10,000

The School of Education at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville has received a $10,000 grant from the Danforth Foundation to expand its Mississippi Valley Writing Project, Don Baden, associate dean, announced today.

"The grant will be used to develop a summer institute for elementary and high school teachers in districts serving children of low income families. The focus of this training will be the building of the participants' skills so they can serve as instructional resources for other professionals in their schools."

"DURING THE past three summers, 47 teachers have attended the five-week intensive summer institute sponsored by the Mississippi Valley Writing Project," Baden said. "Some of these participants have returned to their school districts and conducted a wide variety of workshops for their colleagues."

However, Baden said a large number of districts have not had an opportunity for this type of inservice training. "The project will extend the opportunity for inservice training to the many districts that are not presently receiving it," he said.

Participants in the project will provide training for teachers in their schools at intervals throughout the 1984-85 academic year. THE DANFORTH Foundation is dedicated to enhancing the humane dimensions of life, with an emphasis on improving the quality of teaching and learning.

Seminars for gifted children offered

Three workshops for teachers and others interested in highly motivated students will be on the agenda for the Summer University at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

According to Robert Wagner, chairman of the department of special education, the Summer Institute for Teachers of the Gifted was motivated by the report "A Nation at Risk," and SIUE is responding to the challenge of the document to get American education turned around.

THE WORKSHOPS, Wagner says, will serve two groups of teachers: those interested in earning university credit, and 2) those looking specifically for Institute credit. Teachers seeking Institute credit will spend a given number of hours in a workshop and ultimately receive a certificate after accumulating 50 hours from the Area Service Center for the Gifted.

Much planning and energy is going into making the institute as strong and effective as possible, Wagner points out. "We've hired the faculty. We have applied for additional funding from the Illinois State Board of Education to be able to do some exciting things during the workshops. We're going to bring in nationally known speakers, some of whom have been in the news lately. It's important to note that this is a cooperative venture," Wagner observes. "Ray Gritter, director of the Area Service Center for the Gifted, and Martha O'Malley, superintendent of the St. Clair County Education Service Region, are playing important roles in the planning and operations of these offerings."

Wagner provided a detailed description of the three workshops that will comprise the Institute.

SPE 410C - Problems and Characteristics of Gifted Children, will meet June 18 through 29, from 1 to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. The course will consider just who the gifted child is and focus on the standards set by the State of Illinois and various school districts used to identify these children. The problems of such students will be examined. For example, there are underachievers who are bright but seem not to want to use all their abilities. There are students from the lower socio-economic environments who lack opportunity to fully exploit their talents. Various learning strategies will be explored, such as acceleration and enrichment type programs, and special groupings. Discussion will center on how to develop these different approaches.

SPE 420C - Methods and Materials in the Education of the Gifted Child, is scheduled June 18 through 29, from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

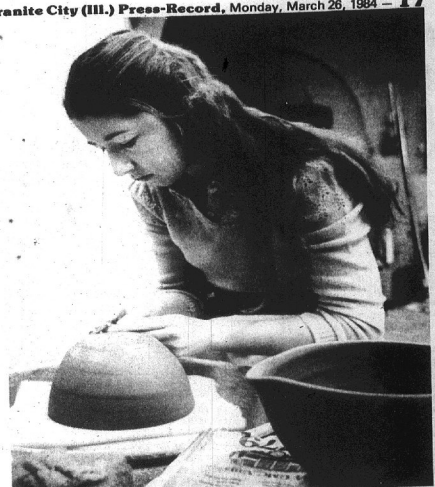

THIS WORKSHOP focuses on how to structure learning in the elementary through high school years. Four standard approaches will be given close attention: 1) the Bloom Taxonomy method describes how a person handles learning, from simple to complex; 2) the Plaguet method emphasizes cognitive development; 3) the "Gulford" method treats the structure of the intellect and behavior; and 4) the Krathwohl method studies the affective dimensions of education. Further, the teachers in the workshop will study and utilize new teaching processes in mathematics, science, language arts and computer sciences in the development of curriculum.

SPE 590C - Seminar: Gifted, will run July 2 through 13, meeting from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. This is primarily an open discussion course. It will deal with: 1) dimensions of technology in education, including but not limited to microcomputers; 2) software analysis and evaluation, and how computer science applies to the classroom (institute participants will spend time with students attending the computer camp at SIUE); and 3) the instructional use of computers and the variety of applications.

At the end of each two-week session, a nationally known speaker will wrap up the workshops. These meetings will be open to the general public.

FOR FURTHER information on the Summer Institute for Teachers of the Gifted, contact Robert Wagner at 1-692-3886. Inquiries concerning any aspect of Summer University should be directed to Paul Gaston, acting director, at 1-692-3772 or by mail at Box 21, SIUE, Edwardsville, Ill. 62026.

Linda Crafton to address spring reading conference

Linda Crafton, associate professor of education at Northeastern Illinois University, will address the 11th annual Spring Reading Conference for teachers and administrators Saturday, April 14, at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

Sponsored by the SIUE School of Education, the one-day seminar will be in the conference rooms of the University Center on the Edwardsville campus from 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Registration is $6 in advance and $7 at the door.

ARE SCHOOLS producing poor readers and writers? Is it true that many high school and even college graduates are not literate enough to handle the demands of the workplace? Are teachers being unjustifiably criticized? Dr. Crafton will explore these issues by inviting participation in reading and writing activities. Dr. Crafton is an experienced elementary, secondary and adult educator. She is especially interested in teacher change, various aspects of language instruction, art and reading, reading/writing and comprehension growth.

She has published in the Journal of Reading, the Reading Teacher and Teaching Reading With Other Language Arts. She is a member of the International Reading Association, the National Council for Teachers of English, and is president-elect of the Illinois College Instructors of Reading Professionals.

FOR FURTHER information or reservations, interested persons may contact SIUE Conferences and Institutes at 1-692-2660.

Mrs. George Stearns entertains Cloverview

Mrs. George Stearns, 1 Terrace Lane, entertained Cloverview Garden Club, at a noon luncheon and afternoon meeting, last week in her home.

President Marge O'Neill called the meeting to order with Mrs. Charles Gandorla giving the club collect.

For the study, Mrs. William McMurry gave points of interest on the Venus Flytrap. She said it is a small plant and is grown indoors and during the warm weather, when they will be able to find plenty of insects for feeding. The plant operates something like a clam shell with their teeth and their resting position is about one third of the way open. Larger insects activate the sensitive hairs which make the trap close completely.

The liquid enzyme that dissolves the insects soft parts, which the plant digests, then the trap opens and the unusable remains fall out. When a trap has captured three or four insects, its work is done and it falls off. New traps grow in its place, she added.

Mrs. Albert Taylor presented a program on the Brown Thrasher which is often mislabeled "brown thrush." It is cinnamon above with a long tail, long curved yellow brown beak, fierce yellow eyes and long brown streaks on a cream colored breast.

Very early in April or sometimes in late March, the thrashers suddenly appear from the south. They are soon nesting in lilac bushes or in a rose tangle. After mating, their songs grow less, until by summer they are seldom heard and soon are gone.

The exhibit for the day was a vining plant. Mrs. John Jenkins brought her lipstick plant as a focal point for a discussion of the group.

Mrs. Louise Sedlack, 14 Snowbird Lane will host the April meeting, it was announced.

Also present were, Mesdames George Knapp, Lester Rhine and William Winter, a guest.

Members of the Butterfly Card Club met Thursday night in the home of Mrs. Hazel Rollins, and presented Mrs. Juanita Rosenberg with a gift.

Memorials 32

IN LOVING memory of BILL WALLACE, March 28, 1973. To some he may be forgotten, to others just a part of the past, but to those who loved and lost him, his memory will always last. Just a cluster of beautiful memories sprayed with willow leaves. Sadly missed by Wife, Daughter and Family. 32 3 26

IN LOVING memory of DONNA IRENE ISHUM, who left us March 25, 1971. To see your face, to hear your voice, to see you talk to a while. To be together in the same old way would be our greatest wish today. It broke our hearts to lose you, but you did not go alone, a part of us went with you. We miss you. God called you home. — Loved and missed by Mom, Dad and Lisa. 32 3 26

IN LOVING memory of WALTER HANFELDER, passed away March 27, 1983. Sadly missed by your son, Bill, Butch, Tammy and Tari. 32 3 26

A FINAL PUSH. Mrs. Jeanne Simon, wife of U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, was in Granite City last week to seek some late election support for her husband's bid for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate. It couldn't have hurt. Her husband won overwhelmingly in this county and was successful in nomination. He will face incumbent Sen. Charles Percy in the November general election.

Activist Board

If the debt could be wiped out overnight, everyone would breathe easier and perhaps even smile at each other occasionally. But it is not immediately remediable—in contrast to the learning deficiencies that the schools battle each day to remedy.

Dollar dilemmas are a harsh reality, but intangibles also are a factor that ought to be noted.

Friktion, animosity, mean-spiritedness or whatever it might be called is an integral part of the pall that has gathered over Granite City and its schools.

FALL CAMPAIGN statements have not been forgotten and seem to keep fueling anger between board members.

It is partly a case of the new kids on the block trying to excel while the older kids think their more extensive experience ought not be shoved into the background. But it is more complicated than that.

David Partney, board president, is not the cause of the wide range of problems but is not necessarily the healer, at least as yet. He thrives on combat, not peace.

Some on the board think that when he sees his 4-3 edge beginning to slip, he incites others of the four by telling them of the latest action or statement or rumor he has heard.

HE HAS ANTENNAE that seem to tell him everything going on around town instantly. When a rival campaign group met last fall, he had "chapter and verse" on the assembly within minutes.

Partney is an activist but does not see himself as stirring the cauldron of unrest for personal reasons. Rather, he thinks a governing body has a duty to stay abreast of the system that it oversees, and not take anything for granted or at face value.

He does not deny that he is a politician. Politics is in his blood, and he keenly enjoys it.

He does deny that he is interested in power for power's sake; he prefers to wield it to accomplish what he thinks needs to be done.

AT THIS EARLY STAGE, not many see him being the president for a long succession of years.

A "patient" who is sick and undergoes an operation, no matter how artfully it is performed, cannot endure it endlessly. And can anyone call surgery a success if the patient—school effectiveness—dies?

It has been said that the board, in trying to improve the district, is shaking it so vigorously that it is undergoing trauma.

Partney is part of and perhaps the spiritual leader of an independent wing of the Democratic party that also attracts Republicans and people who think of themselves as hard-headed taxpayers. The political strength of his movement is growing, and the group's ambitions clearly go beyond the schools.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the more traditional, longer-entrenched Democratic faction also has enjoyed and exercised political clout. It undoubtedly has sought to influence hiring and other decisions over the years.

An administrator once said that the presence of someone like Partney was positive, in that he served as a helpful minority voice when the majority was thinking about adopting anything of an extreme nature.

Now that he is president, the same attacking style may not produce equally beneficial results.

Treasurer Hogan, who nominated Partney for president, denies there is an "us against them" philosophy. He sees all seven eventually working as a team.

But this ideal is not yet a reality. He did not tell at least three of the members about transferring six administrators, a plan adopted last week.

HOGAN DENIES that the majority four are getting their heads together, but he cannot seriously deny that they have remarkable empathy or ESP or something going for them.

He denies vehemently that two specific individuals believed to have been terminated Dec. 6, effective June 30, actually are being terminated. He says news media are flatly wrong about it.

He is right in that the basic motion does not say which way will depart. Thus far, he has not acted to clarify their status or to reassure any or all of the quartet by a precise motion to retain them.

St. Louis media on Dec. 7 named two persons being dismissed, quoting Partney. No other board members have expressed any doubt about who is being forced out, and the two may be formally designated Tuesday night.

THE CHAMPIONING of change cannot be done without alienating opponents of specific changes. But there would be much more public acceptance if it was based on an objective study weighing administrators' good and bad points.

As a negotiator for the school system, one of the individuals has rubbed some of the crowd the wrong way. But his experience and skill have contributed to economies and efficiencies. He is not perfect but is highly respected by those who doubt this may be relying on incorrect input.

He is not the only person in the room who can do his job, but the quick way he was targeted smacks of reprisal. And the timing harms his financial future unnecessarily.

If any who voted for the Dec. 6 consolidations wants to reconsider, all that has to be done is voice a motion to that effect. It would pass.

THE SPEED with which the board combined the four jobs, almost before new members could get their feet firmly on the ground, is one of the well-loved but also well-hated aspects of the board.

Close at his side in daily school operations is Finance Director Owca, who enjoys the confidence of all parties and appears to be doing an excellent job.

Even in such a "best of all possible worlds" position, cheered and praised by everyone for his accuracy and foresight, Owca along with some of the other officials is visibly aging.

Mrs. Ruth Laht, about whom many kind things are said, particularly her service until 1983 as Chapter 1 director in the district, speaks little. When she does, she always seems to agree with the board president.

HER HUSBAND, Guy, a retired teacher, was one of the giants of the Federation's early history here as it sought better pay and benefits in a profession long hampered by low pay.

Seeing still-unmet goals, Hogan and Partney are working with others to achieve them.

They appear to be strong advocates of their ideas, warning of the dire consequences of hesitancy.

THEIR IDEAS differ in some respects but often coincide. When the two see eye to eye, things happen, and quickly.

Although Partney devotes much time to school matters, the hardest worker probably is Hogan, who serves on the policy, personnel and financial committees.

He also is a member of the certified employee negotiating committee.

Hogan and Partney will try their hand at helping to negotiate a new agreement with teachers this summer, succeeding Monroe Worthen and a former board member, George Moore.

SECRETARY Thomas Mlosky and Members Dewey Melton and Worthen are the board's minority after years as part of the majority.

They seven members: Alan Crider, is a former Granite City teacher and former administrator of the gifted program.

He in theory could become a "swing" vote; he has been known to acknowledge valid points in opposing arguments.

SO FAR, Crider has accepted the discipline and shared the power that can only be achieved on a seven-member board when there is a meeting of four minds.

Hart gains additional delegate

The official results of the statewide delegate races have yet to be certified by the Illinois Board of Elections, but Colorado Sen. Gary Hart has apparently gained two delegates and Walter Mondale four in this congressional district, according to the office of U.S. Rep. Melvin Price.

Those six will be representing the candidates of their choice July at the Democratic National Convention.

Unofficial results last week appeared to signal a five-delegate victory for Democratic presidential candidate former Vice President Mondale, until late results from six East St. Louis precincts were finally tabulated.

Granite City Alderman Sharon Perjak, a Mondale delegate hopeful who had declared a cautious victory on Thursday's Press-Record, conceded defeat Friday after comparing vote counts with other Mondale delegates.

Perjak was displaced by Hart delegate Nancy Beckley of Granite City.

The other delegates are, unofficially: Clyde Jordan (Mondale) from East St. Louis; Charles Hester (Mondale) from Granite City; Sheila O'Malley (Mondale) from Belleville; Betty Donovan (Mondale) from Fairview Heights and Larry Moskop (Hart) from Granite City.

The delegates were elected from the 21st Congressional District, which takes in a five-county area in Madison County only. Hart delegates fared better, tying Mondale in delegate counts three to three. Those local counts, in order, were Hester (Mondale, 10,391); Mrs.

Beckley (Hart, 9,897); Moskop (Hart, 9,798); Mrs. Perjak (Mondale, 9,795); Mike Mansfield (an uncommitted Mondale delegate, 9,586, and Paul Beckley (Hart, 9,415).

Paul Beckley, who failed to gain a delegate slot, unofficially placed seventh.

GO WITH EXPERIENCE...

WE'RE CELEBRATING
OUR 27th YEAR...

America's Oldest Lawn Spray Company...

We know, as all agronomists know, that the secret to beautiful grass is properly scheduled applications of fertilizer, weed killers to control both grass types (crabgrass) and broadleaf (dandelions-chickweed) weeds and insecticide to control webworms, chinch bugs, etc.

Included in our spray program are applications of SLOW RELEASE NITROGEN THAT NEVER STOPS FEEDING as long as grass is growing and actually slows down its feeding during periods of low rainfall when it's not needed. If your lawn isn't receiving applications of SLOW RELEASE NITROGEN you're not getting your money's worth.

... THE GREEN LAWS PLAN provides five sprays — early Spring, late Spring, Summer, late Summer, and Fall. It supplies fertilizers just when your lawn needs them. Five broadleaf weed sprays to control dandelion, chickweed, buckhorn, plantain, spurge... Those weeds that seem never to stop coming up from early Spring to late Fall. Crabgrass control in the Spring and insecticide applications in the Summer.

OUR PLAN INCLUDES GRUB CONTROL WITH OBTANOL, THE ONLY CHEMICAL THAT REALLY CONTROLS GRUB.

If some Fall weeds come up after our last weed killer is applied —
